Suit about a Hand.

A rather novel case was brought before Al-derman Donaldons on Tuesday. Dr. M'Cook, Br. entered suit against Wm. M. Jehnston, millwright, of the Bixth Ward, for $67 das his left hand badly smashed by the fall of a heavy piece of iron, in Lippincott's shovel dottor, some two years ago, and was attond-ed by Dr. M'Cook. The hand had been split Were several hundred Union soldiers going back to their regiments. Many of them were returning from hospitals, some from detailed duty, and some from visits to their homes on farlough. In the car where my friend found a shelter from the storm, on the way from Aquia to Falmouth, there were several officers and a large number of privates. One of these open, and terribly crushed, and it was at arst feared that amputation would be necessary. The hand was saved, however, but as it healed know that every word you have been saying is in direct violation of the letter and spirit of military law, for you have apoken in scorn of Congress, in contempt of the Precident. You have sneared at every member of the gov-ernment; you have found fault with every divil and military morement; you have said that the army was dishcarisened and demoral-ised. Such men as you are, wearing the in-signia of military power, are the very persons who have done this evil; and if the robol gov-ernment had a thousand spins and emizaries in our army, they would all talk just as you have done. Now, sir, I do not charge you with being a traitor, bat I do say that any officer who dares to talk as you have has no businees in the army. You ought to resign, sir. You had better go home and grumblo there." "Sir," said the officer, "when I ask your advice you will have some right to in-struct me in regard to my duty, but till then any man who taiks to me in that style had better have some regard for his personal safety."
