A Simultaneous Forward Movement Not Improbable.

The N. Y. Commercial says in the situation some evidence that a general forward movement may have been ordered by the President on the 22d of February, 1863, as in 1862. It says:

On the 27th of January, 1862, the President ordered a forward movement of all the army and naval forces of the United States to take place on the 22d of February. Gen. Grant accomplished with the order by advancing on Forts Henry and Donelson, securing to the national arms the brilliant victories at those points, which resulted in the peaceful possession of Columbus and Bowling Green, Tenn., and Nashville, Tennessee. The commander at Port Royal obeyed the order by proceeding to invest Fort Pulaski. Gen. Banks advanced his column up the Shenandoah. The naval forces made ready for a military movement, if we except Flag-Officer Farragut's fleet, which awaited the co-operation of Gen. Butler to take New Orleans.
It is not known that the President has followed the example of last year, and ordered a simultaneous forward movement on this anniversary of the birth of the immortal Washington, but a brilliant chance at the situation beckons, and the press at each point to be stated separately. Payment to be made on receipt by the Captain of the boat for the amount delivered. Contractors will require the boats to produce their charters or other satisfactory evidence to show that they are in Government employ.
Proposals will also be received until the same time for the delivery of from 50,000 to 100,000 or more bushels of Coal, to be delivered at Smithland, Ky., to the Quartermaster at that post. The Coal to be delivered in boats or barges. If in boats the boats are to be furnished free of charge to the United States. If in barges, the Government to have the use of the barges for thirty days from the time the Coal is delivered at Smithland; and if detained longer than thirty days, then the Government shall pay for the hire of the barges at the rate of Three (3) Dollars each per day, commencing after the expiration of the thirty days, until the barges are delivered again to the contractor or his authorized agent at Smithland. All Coal delivered at Smithland under this contract shall be inspected and measured by a sworn city inspector, duly authorized for that purpose, at Louisville, Ky., and said certificate of measurement shall be presented to the Quartermaster at Smithland on delivery of the Coal. All barges shall be surveyed by disinterested parties, and in case the delivery of all of the barges should at any time equal the capacity of the boats, then the barges shall be towed by the boats. The name, number and mark of each barge about to be given in detail. The Coal is to be delivered before the 31st of March.
Contractors will please give full name and post office address.
