Generals Scott and McClellan—A Chapter of History.

The secret history of this war cannot, perhaps, be written for years to come, but however delayed, there cannot be a doubt it is to appear one day or other. Meantime, many contributions may be expected towards this work—some of which will require to be substantiated by more positive evidence, than mere probability and conjecture, or the equally delusive evidence of contemporary gossip and rumors set afloat by evil-surmisers. Where to place the following, which appears in the New York Tribune of Thursday, we must leave to the judgment of our readers:

A Philadelphia correspondent furnishes the following explanation of General McClellan's failures to report to General Scott when the latter was his active superior, and of the silence of General Scott in view of the recent publication of his official letter of complaint against General McClellan. We do not know that this explanation is correct, and we publish it only to elicit further elucidation, which the matter eminently requires. Can it be true that our Government allowed a detected traitor—one had betrayed a position of the very highest trust—to be placed on the retired list and to go to Europe on pay as still an officer of our army? If it did, who can wonder that treason is rife in our service, and that gunboats and ships of war are betrayed into the hands of our enemies? But hear our correspondent:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Sir: Many persons are disappointed in learning that General Scott will not publish an explanation of his complaints against General McClellan to the Secretary of War, which was, by the call of Mr. Stevens, of Pa., on the Secretary of War, published and read in the House of Representatives. Many ask why was the letter called for? There was discussion on the subject, and they say that it was intended to show by it. Thereby hangs a tale. General Scott's position is a very delicate one; some people do suspect the General's Union sentiments to lean toward the wayward sister; but no matter about that. General Scott writes to the Secretary of War, complaining of McClellan's indifference or neglect of him for not reporting his plans or consulting him about the disposition of his forces. This occurred sometime after it had been disposed of by General McClellan that General Scott's office was not the safest place for him to expose his plans or make known what he was doing. It is known that Gen. McClellan's plans had been several times in a very mysterious way made known to the rebels almost as quickly as they were made known to our commanders in the field. Gen. McClellan found out the individual; it was Gen. Scott's son-in-law, Henry L. Scott, who was with Gen. S. in Washington as an Inspector-General, with the rank, pay, &c., of a Colonel of Cavalry. General McClellan went to the President about the extraordinary denouncement, and Col. Scott and Adjt. Gen. Thomas, of the Board of Army Officers of Treachery were summoned to the White House to be confronted on the charge. Col. Scott confessed his guilt! What was done? Why, Col. Scott, instead of being shot for his treason, was allowed to be placed on the retired list for life, and to receive the pay and emoluments of a Lieutenant Colonel of Cavalry! He immediately went to Europe, where he is doing all he can for secession! Gen. Scott will not publish anything. Is not here the reason why Gen. McClellan did not report his plans to him, and Gen. Scott will not stir up a matter that would be of no advantage to one of his family who is a traitor living upon a Government which he basely betrays. SAINT.

From Grant's Department.

The following dispatch, dated Cairo, March 11, to the Chicago Tribune, gives some additional

United States steamer General Lyon arrived here this evening direct from Young's Point. One of her officers repeats a story of the capture of Yazoo City by our forces, which, in the shape of rumor, has been current in Memphis and Cairo for a few days past. It is perhaps correct, though there are no particulars.

A Philadelphia correspondent furnishes the following explanation of General McClellan's failures to report to General Scott when the latter was his active superior, and of the silence of General Scott in view of the recent publication of his official letter of complaint against General McClellan. We do not know that this explanation is correct, and we publish it only to elicit further elucidation, which the matter eminently requires. Can it be true that our Government allowed a detected traitor—one had betrayed a position of the very highest trust—to be placed on the retired list and to go to Europe on pay as still an officer of our army? If it did, who can wonder that treason is rife in our service, and that gunboats and ships of war are betrayed into the hands of our enemies? But hear our correspondent:
