QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON CITY, March 19, 1863.
OWNERS OF STEAM VESSELS are invited to send to the Quartermaster General's office tenders for their charter or sale.
Tenders should contain descriptions of the vessels, their dimensions, enrolled or registered, tonnage, actual carrying capacity, material, whether coppered, whether side-wheel or propellers, whether copper or iron fastened, and speed and power of engines and boilers, and should state the price at which they are offered, for long or short charter, with the estimated value of the vessel in case of loss, or in case the government should prefer to purchase instead of chartering.
Owners of steam vessels already in the service of the Quartermaster's Department, are requested to make known to the Department any reduction in their present rates which they may be willing to make, and also the price at which they will be willing to sell them.
All such tenders should be addressed to the Quartermaster General of the United States, at Washington, and should be endorsed "Proposals for the charter or sale of Steamers."
No vessel received they will be considered, and the Department will endeavor to reduce the heavy expense attending army transportation upon the ocean and lake waters, by substituting, wherever it can do so, cheaper vessels of equal capacity for those now employed. mh24:3m

General Butler in New York.

On Thursday evening General BUTLER addressed an audience of some four thousand of the choicest people of New York at the Academy of Music. His speech was long, and is reported in full in the morning papers of that city. That it was vigorous and eloquent we need not say. We give a few extracts:

And now, my friends, if you will allow me to pass on for a moment in this line of thought, as we come up to the point of time when their men laid down their constitutional obligations, What were my rights and what were theirs? At that hour they repudiated the Constitution of the United States, by solemn vote in solemn Convention; and not only that, but they took arms in their hands, and undertook by force to rend from the Government what rightfully belonged to them the fairest heritage which my fathers had given to me as a rich legacy to my children. When they did that, they abrogated, abnegated, and forfeited every constitutional right, and released me from every constitutional obligation. [Loud cheers.] And, when I was thus called upon to say what should be my action with regard to Slavery, I was left to the natural instincts of my heart, as prompted by a Christian education in New England, and I dealt with it accordingly, as I was no longer bound. [Immense applause.]

Then I undertook earnestly and respectfully to maintain, with the same sense of duty to my constitutional obligations and to State rights, so long as they remained under the Constitution, that required me to support the system of Slavery—and the same sense of duty and right, after they had gone out from under that Constitution, caused me to follow the dictates of my own conscience, untrammelled. [Cheers.] So, my friends, you see, however misjudging I may have been, and I speak to my old Democratic friends, I claim we went along, step by step, up to that point, and we should still go along, step by step, for, except the right to hold slaves was made a part of the compromises made by our fathers in the Constitution, and if their State rights were to be respected because of our allegiance to the Constitution and our respect to State rights, yet, when that sacred obligation was taken away, and we as well as the negro were disenthralled, why should not we follow the dictates of God's law and humanity? [Tremendous applause, and cries of "Bravo, Bravo."]

THE UNION—BUT NOT AS IT WAS.

Who is interfering with the Constitution as it is? Who has taken any attacks upon the Constitution? We are fighting with those who have gone out and repudiated the Constitution. [Cheers.] And now, my friends, I do not know but I shall use some heresy, but as a Democrat, as an Andrew Jackson Democrat, I am not for the Union as it was. [Great cheering. "God!" "Good!"] I say, as a Democrat, and an Andrew Jackson Democrat, I am not for the Union to be again as it was. Understand me; I was for the Union as it was, because I saw, or thought I saw, the troubles in the future which have burst upon us; but having undergone those troubles, having spent all this blood, and this treasure, I do not mean to go back again and be cheek by jowl with South Carolina as I was before, if I can help it. [Cheers: "You're right."

Mark me now, let no man misunderstand me, and I repeat lest I may be misunderstood—there are none so slow to understand as those who do not want to—mark me, I say I do not mean to give up a single inch of the soil of South Carolina. If I had been alive at that time, and had the position, the will and the military, I would have dealt with South Carolina as Jackson did, and kept her in the Union at all hazards, but now she has gone out, and I will take care that when she comes in again she comes in better behaved [cheers]; that she shall no longer be the firebrand of the Union, and that she shall enjoy the blessings of a Republican form of government.

NEITHER FIGHTER.

If is idle to tell me Great Britain does not know there vessels are fitted out in her ports? It is idle and insulting to tell you that she put the Alabama under $20,000 bonds, not to go into the service of the Confederate States. We did not so deal with her when she was at war with Russia. On the suggestion of the British Minister, our Government stopped, with the rapidity of lightning, the sailing of a steamer, until the Minister himself was willing to let her go. We must take some means to put a stop to these proceedings. I was told the other day that the amount of property already destroyed would amount to $5,000,000! What, then, is our remedy? The peaceful and proper remedy, for we must look forward to those matters. The Government will not order its forces, but we ourselves must look at it, for we are the people—we are the Government [applause]; and when our Government gets ready to take the step, we must be ready to support it.

England tells us what to do; when there was a likelihood of war she stopped the exportation of those articles she thought we wanted. Let us do the same thing. [Great applause and loud cheers.] Let us proclaim non-intercourse, so that no ounce of food from the United States shall by any accident ever find its way into an Englishman's mouth until the piracy is stopped. [Applause, and cries of "Good," and "Go;" "Let us hear that again,"] I never say anything that I am afraid to say again. [Renewed applause.] I say again, let us proclaim non-intercourse, so that no ounce of food from America shall ever by any accident find its way to an Englishman's mouth until these piracies are stopped.

THE DUTY OF LOYAL MEN—THE FATE OF TRAITORS.

I desire to say that it is the duty of every man to be loyal to the government, to sustain the government, to pardon its errors, to help rectify its mistakes, to press it on to everything that it may do for the country, and let it carry the country on in its course of glory and grandeur on which it was placed by our fathers; for let me say to you, my friends, you young men, that no man yet has ever prospered who opposed his country in time of war. [Cheers.] The Tory of the Revolution, the Hartford Conventionist of 1813, the immortal Seven that voted against the supplies in the Mexican War, all history is against them. And let no politician put himself in the way of the march of this country to glory and greatness; for he will be crushed. Its course is onward and certain, and let him who opposes it beware,

"The mower mows on, though the sickle may writhe,
And the Copperhead curl round the blade of the scythe."

Ons of the letters captured at the rebel signal station near Fort Hudson, has this important information regarding the armament of that stronghold. "We have 55 cannon at Fort Hudson; 35 of them are 64-pound rifled cannon, with steel pointed bolts. Also, 20 cannon that are 128-pounders, and 40 siege guns."

"The Maine's Bluff Affair,"

Whether it proved abortive before reaching the point entitling it to receive such a designation, or whether it lawfully acquired the same by actually reaching that point, is even yet a mystery—though, possibly, before our last edition, this evening, goes to press, we may have, by telegraph, a fixed and final solution. As, however, we have been kept in suspense so long—awaiting, what has not yet come, the official reports which must resolve our doubts, and decide between the conflicting reports of newspapers and newspaper correspondents, we judge it best to lay before our readers the following dispatch, dated Cairo, April 2, which appears in the Cincinnati Gazette, and leave them, if the telegraph shall not relieve them, to balance the accounts, weigh the probabilities, and decide the case for themselves:

By the steamer Graham we have Memphis papers of the evening of Tuesday. The mystery in regard to the Haines Bluff affair is not yet cleared up. The Bulletin claims still that Gen. Sherman met with success. It also claims that the same news was brought by rebel deserters.

The unfavorable news comes from the officers of the steamer City of Alton and others, who say the fleet up Steele's Bayou, consisted of four gunboats, the Pittsburgh, Carondolet, Cincinnati and Louisville, and twelve transports. So far as getting up within three miles of Sunflower was concerned, there was much difficulty. The guerrilling along the banks of Deer creek, fled in all directions at the approach of the land forces. Before General Sherman arrived the casualties on the gunboats were four killed and ten wounded. From the point described to the Sunflower, the limbs of trees prevented the transports from going further. In consideration of this the entire expedition returned. The probabilities are that the latter statement is the correct one.
