THE LATE DISPATCHES SENT TO ENGLAND.—The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia North American says of these dispatches: "If I am not misinformed, they are of such a character as will involve the withdrawal of Mr. Adams, should they not be complied with."

WISCONSIN SOLDIERS' VOTE.—The returns from the army of the vote of the soldiers for Judge of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin, show the following aggregate:
For the Republican Union candidate... 6,158
For the Dem. Surrender candidate..... 2,216
Majority..... 3,942

NEW JERSEY.—This poor little State, which is more infested with Copperheads than any other—for they are not only numerous but unusually venomous—has many excellent live Union men. A great meeting was held at Trenton yesterday, and we trust that a ball has been set in motion that will crush out the Copperheads.

SOME intimation has appeared in the rebel newspapers that an attempt will be made to overpower and capture Admiral FARRAGUT and his three vessels. It is to be hoped that a portion of PORTER'S fleet has succeeded ere this in running the blockade, so that FARRAGUT may have a more adequate force with which to operate between Vicksburg and Port Hudson, on the Mississippi, and to close the rebel communications up the Red river.

WE trust that the late advices we have from Newbern, which refer to Gen. Foster's ability to hold out against the rebel leaguer, so much longer than had at first been supposed possible, will prove well-founded. There seems to have been an error in supposing that his provisions were nearly exhausted, as he is said in these advices to have sufficient quantity to last until the 1st of May, if not longer. Doubtless, all measures that can be taken to relieve him from his perilous position, will be promptly carried out.

The Surrender Party.

The "Democracy" of Westmoreland county had a meeting in Greensburg the other day, for the purpose of reviving the defunct resolutions of the Legislature in favor of a Convention to alter the National Constitution, so as to make it acceptable to the slaveholders in arms against the Government. Even the copperheads of the Legislature became ashamed of them and let them die; but those Westmoreland fellows, who sent a man to Harrisburg, (and a clergyman too,) who acknowledged that he did not go there "to legislate for God," seem to be ashamed of nothing. The profoundest depths of infamy have no terrors for them. But scandalous as those old resolutions are, they are nothing more than Gen. Stokes' speech translated into plain English.

A Catholic View of Slavery.

The Cincinnati Catholic Telegraph, in an able article on the subject of "Free White Labor," remarks:

Slavery is nearly extinct without an effort on our part to destroy it. We, Catholics, have kept our oath most scrupulously; we have let the South alone, and only when effort failed and the whole fabric of the government was about to fall into ruin, and anarchy overspread the land, did we utter a word, in self-defence, against that pernicious system which has brought all this suffering on our country.

We may here observe that it is painful to us to write on this subject, knowing the violent prejudices of convictions which prevail, and particularly amongst our fellow-Catholic citizens. But when prejudice becomes dangerous as well as ridiculous, it is time for some one to expose its folly. It will soon be obsolete.

The Copperhead Democracy charge the abolitionists with bringing all this suffering on our country; but this editor, who looks at the question with the naked eye, and not through partisan spectacles, renders a verdict more in accordance with facts and with sound reason.

From Grant's Army.—The Expedition to Greenville.—Other Movements.

The correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, with Grant's army, gives the following account of the objects of the expedition of Gen. Steele's division to Greenville:

Greenville is located on the left bank as you descend the river (Mississippi) diagonally opposite and South of Island 85, or Chicot's Island. North of Greenville, and twenty miles distant, is Lake Bolivar, from which outlets Issaquena or Deer Creek. South of this, nearer the Yazoo, Deer Creek connects with Steele's Bayou. From Steele's Bayou to the Sunflower is another stream. Black Bayou, the scene of the recent exploit of the gunboats, and their rescue by Gen. Sherman. The area traversed and inclosed by the Sunflower, Deer Creek, and the Mississippi, although in some sections overflowed, is of surpassing fertility, and abounds in horses, cattle, negroes, forage, and supplies of every description. It has been, not inappleably, called the garden of Mississippi.

The objects of the expedition are numerous and obvious. One object is to sweep the country of Ferguson's guerrillas; for, although of regular organization, and recognized by the Confederate Government as conducting legitimate warfare, they are unquestionably guerrillas of the deepest and blackest hue.

A glance at the map will show how promisingly near to Deer Creek and the Yazoo is the Sunflower. It would not be impossible, say, it is probable, that this army will march thither, and effect a lodgment upon its banks, to be in readiness to receive another expedition which is talked of in that region. Under ordinary circumstances, I am aware this information would be forbidden, but I have reason to know that, if deemed practicable, it will have been accomplished before this. A portion of the 15th army corps is expected to follow Gen. Steele, if the project succeeds. There are other movements expected to follow this diversion in quick succession, one of them directed up the Arkansas, where the enemy are reported to have again entrenched themselves. The information reaches me so indefinitely that I say nothing to say if it were advisable, to what point it will be directed. It is known that Fine Bluff are capable of being strongly fortified, and the indications point that way.

[For the Pittsburgh Gazette.]
Allegheny.

Newspaper discussion concerning the merits or demerits of litigated claims for property, whether real or personal, seldom determine anything: Parties once fairly embarked in the tortuous and troubled sea of law, however clear and demonstrative may be the arguments in favor of one side or the other, fail of effect, fulfilling the old saw "if convinced against their will, remain of the same opinion still."

The controversy regarding the right to the low ground on the river fronting on out lots No. 28, 29, 30 and 31, has been of long standing. Hitherto in no trial before the courts have the real merits of the case been touched. It is to be hoped, however, now, as the late suit, in the form it was instituted, could not be successfully prosecuted, the attorneys having wisely taken a "non-suit"—by no means with the view of abandoning the case, but to repair the error of the former,—a satisfactory result will be obtained.

This is a controversy between individuals and a corporation, and what is everybody's business is oftentimes nobody's concern. It has occurred to me that a brief history and reference to the origin of the "Reserve Tract," opposite Pittsburgh, might interest the community, and at the same time throw some light on the question at issue.

By an act of Assembly, passed the 12th day of March, 1783, for the purpose of redeeming and paying off the certificates of depreciation, given to the officers and soldiers of the "Pennsylvania Line," and for other purposes therein mentioned, a certain tract of land was "reserved" to the use of the State, containing three thousand acres, in an oblong form, of about one mile in depth from the Allegheny and Ohio rivers, and extending up and down said rivers, from opposite Fort Pitt, so far as was necessary to include the said quantity of acres.

By another act of Assembly, passed the 11th of September, 1787, the "Supreme Executive Council" of the State was empowered to lay out and survey and apportion the said Reserved Tract into town and out lots. By an order of the said Supreme Executive Council the said town and out lots were, on the 31st of Nov., 1788, offered and sold at the city of Philadelphia by public sale.

The survey and plot of said tract is on record in the Surveyor General's office, clearly exhibiting on its face a lane or street extending along the Allegheny river from Grimy's run, down the same to the lot below Gen. Robinson's dwelling; and every patent issued by the State Government calls for Bank Lane, as the same extends along the Allegheny river by the courses thereof. At the lot last mentioned the said lane leaves the river and runs to the South Common, where the railroad now is. Thence it proceeds along the south side of said common ground to a point between out lots No. 31 and 32, where it again runs to the river Allegheny, where Bank Lane again calls for the river Allegheny by the courses thereof, on reaching out lot No. 31, the boundary of which calls for Bank Lane. But to make this more clear we proceed to the words of patent for out lot No 29. Beginning at a white walnut, standing on the bank of the Allegheny river, (part of which is occupied by Messrs. Baxter, Borland and others), at the distance of 66 perches 2 1-10ths west from the last part of Bank Lane which lies from the river, opposite Pittsburgh, to the common ground belonging to said town, being the entire front on the river of lots 31 and 30, where this claim is set up. All the out lots below No. 29, in the patents, call for the southern boundary, as Bank lane follows the courses of the Ohio river, this being the point where, in the view of the Surveyors of the Reserve Tract, the two rivers united and formed the Ohio river. All above 29 call for Bank lane, as it follows the survey of the Allegheny, except the lots No. 32, 33, 34, 35, around which Bank lane was laid out, these lots calling for the river and the common.

The low ground in front of the lots No. 31, 30, 29, and 28 embraces the property which is attempted to be wrested from the city and from the use and enjoyment of the present owners of said out lots. The grant of the State to the enjoyment of Bank Lane, as it runs along the courses of the river " to whatever point the river may recede, is perpetual and inalienable by any authority in the Councils of the city. It does not enure exclusively to the use of the city, but is invested in every town and out lot holder in the entire Reserve Tract, and nothing but the decision of the Supreme Judicial Tribunals of the State or United States can divest one foot of the low grounds between these lots and the rivers from the tenure of the original grantees. It stands precisely on the same foundation that the low ground on out lots No. 32, 33, 34 and 35 adhered to, those lots for which suits were brought against Robinson. His patents called for the river, and though the survey actually embraces a much less quantity of ground, the Court awarded the title to the river, as the patents demanded. On exactly the same well established principle of law will the whole river front be vested in Bank Lane, as it was in Water street, Pittsburgh.

No Island existed (but Kilbuck Island, which has entirely disappeared) when the survey was made; none appears on the map of the Reserve Tract, an official record which the courts are bound to respect. It was not until within the last thirty years that such a thing as Neleon's Island was heard of, and it was only owing to the encroachments of the river in high freshets, creating bayous, and dikes in the loose sandy alluvial formation, that Island No. 2 sprung into existence, and no appearance or name of an Island was given to the property in question.

We have said that the grant of the State to property owners in the Reserve Tract for Bank lane, as it follows the course of the Allegheny and Ohio rivers is inalienable by the councils; that this right by the said grant of 1783 adheres to every lot and out lot on the whole Reserved Tract, and is so specially affirmed in words in every patent, of which there are hundreds, and as many of the now owners reside in other States will ultimately, if the claim is persisted in; have to be tried in the Federal tribunal of the United States, where the claim to Water street on exactly the same ground was determined in favor of the city of Pittsburgh more than 40 years ago. In that case as, probably, in the present, the claimants to a part of Water street, Pittsburgh, had patents from the Penns; they had surveys by metes and bounds on the Monongahela front, and all the muniments of title, but the plot of Pittsburgh clearly showed the river in front of the town lots, and the courts held the title of all the privileges of the river front to be in the city and its lot holders.

The cases are exactly parallel, and quite as clear and conclusive in the Allegheny case. The object of the present narrative has originated in an application before Councils to settle forever this long controverted case, and vest either by purchase or otherwise in the city, or the claimants a final title, which in our estimation cannot be done by any act or compromise whatever, by the city authorities, for the reason before stated, that every lot owner in the whole Reserve Tract has an interest in Bank Lane, which no city or other municipal corporation within its boundary have any feasible authority to alienate, nor would a purchase from the present or any other claimants add one grain of value to the city beyond what it now possessed.

The city has the right to improve Bank Lane within her municipal boundary, and to charge and receive wharfage, but no right whatever to barter it away to individuals; nor would her title be in any way strengthened by purchasing the claims of the present or any future contestants. GRAY.
