Fears of Famine in the South.

JEFF. DAVIS has issued an address to the people of the Confederate States, in accordance with a resolution of the rebel Congress, urging them to turn their sole attention to the production of provisions and forage. He says:

Let your fields be devoted exclusively to the production of corn, oats, beans, peas, potatoes and other food for man and beast; let corn be sowed broadcast for fodder in immediate proximity to railroads, rivers and canals, and let your efforts be directed to the prompt supply of these articles in the districts where our armies are operating.

He says the meat ration is reduced to one-half the usual quantity in some of the armies. It is a wail of distress—an appeal to lay aside all thought of gain, and to devote themselves to securing their liberties, without which these gains would be valueless.

Simultaneously with this the Governor of Alabama issues his appeal to the same effect. He says "the enemy has called to his aid the terrible appliances of want and starvation," then and appeals to them at length in words of which the following may serve as a sample:

Look around you this moment, when the crop upon which the poor must mainly depend is not yet planted, and behold the want and destitution which, notwithstanding the munificent provision made by public and private benevolence, is to be found at the hearthstones of many whose legitimate protectors have fallen in battle or are now fighting in defense of your homes and property. Let us not deceive ourselves. The failure to raise the largest possible quantity of supplies the present year may bring disaster and ruin upon our cause.

The Fleet on the Mississippi.

Admiral Farragut is between Port Hudson and Vicksburg with two vessels, and a ram from General Ellett's ram fleet. Admiral Porter still lies above Vicksburg with his fleet of iron-clads, where they are [illegible] as much use as they would be at Pittsburgh. There was a statement that he was making preparations to send some of them below Vicksburg, but that is now denied. Indeed, so far as the river force is concerned, things appear to be in a dead lock.

A writer in the New York Times suggests that a part of the iron clad fleet which lately made a demonstration upon Charleston, be sent round to the Mississippi, run past Port Hudson, and take possession of that 150 miles between that place and Vicksburg, together with the Red river. There are two practical questions in this scheme which the writer does not discuss: the ability of the Monitors to round the capes of Florida, and also their ability to ascend the Mississippi. The scheme strikes us as a good one, if it is at all practicable. Still, we confess we should rather see the job of taking Charleston completed before they leave.

A Curious Present and Message.

We had a dispatch, a day or two ago, from Vicksburg, stating that two chaplains had been released by the rebels and sent under a flag of truce to our lines. We learn that the officer who accompanied the flag of truce brought with him a magnificent bouquet from Gen. PEMBERTON, as a present to Gen. SHERMAN. It was composed of rarest flowers, both native and exotic, and its aroma filled the air. It had nothing of the smell of gunpowder about it. The officer presented the rare and beautiful gift, and stated to the Union General that he had no objection to his seeing the batteries, &c., at Vicksburg, and invited him to come down and see them.

Ratio of Soldiers to Population.

The following table shows the ratio of the number of soldiers furnished thus far by each State to the population of the State. In Kansas, it would appear that one-fourth of the entire male population has gone to the war. The States are arranged in the order of their ratio:

1. Kansas	1 to 7.30	13. Massachus'ts	1 to 17.06
2. R. Island	1 to 11.10	14. New York	1 to 17.58
3. Illinois	1 to 12.63	15. N Hampshire	1 to 17.86
4. Indiana	1 to 13.15	16. Wisconsin	1 to 18.23
5. Ohio	1 to 13.30	17. Kentucky	1 to 20.29
6. Iowa	1 to 13.59	18. Maine	1 to 20.94
7. Pennsyl'na	1 to 14.54	19. New Jersey	1 to 22.40
8. Minnesota	1 to 14.65	20. Delaware	1 to 22.44
9. Michigan	1 to 15.61	21. Missouri	1 to 31.08
10. Connecticut	1 to 16.12	22. Oregon	1 to 52.56
11. Vermont	1 to 16.58	23. California	1 to 54.28
12. W. Virginia	1 to 16.75	24. Maryland	1 to 68.70

"DON'T BITE OFF YOUR NOSE TO SPITE YOUR FACE."—Such is the homely advice of an old saw. But the rebels in North Carolina have not been taking it. A letter from Beaufort, in that State, says:

The rebels have succeeded in burning the turpentine forests in every direction, and spare the tar and turpentine in casks no more than they do cotton in the bales. It is all given to the flames before it shall aid the "cursed Yankees."

This act inflicts no particular damage upon us. We can obtain tar and turpentine from other sources, but the poor people of North Carolina are ruined by the destruction of their only resource.

A HEROINE.—A party of about one hundred copperheads started from Cartersville, Hendricks county, Indiana, on Saturday last, to attend a Butternut Convention at Danville. While en route, the party stopped at the house of Mr. Odell to pull down an American flag, which was flying from his house. One of them said, "Let's take down this d—d abolition flag." Another yelled, "Down with it." Mr. Odell's daughter came out, and, putting her arms about the flag, said to them: "Touch it if you dare!" They were too cowardly, however, to carry out their threat; but the fact that it was made shows the spirit which runs rampant in the secret lodges of the K. G. C.

A COLUMBUS dispatch states that Brigadier General J. D. Cox has been assigned to the command of the Military District of Ohio. His headquarters are to be in Cincinnati, and Gen. Burnside will take to field.

AN order has been given to Governor Andrew, from the War Department, to arm the colored regiments from Massachusetts with first-class arms.

Rosecrans' Army.

The following letter to the New York Tribune gives a lively and cheering picture of the present condition of things in the Army of the Cumberland. It is from the pen of no ordinary writer:

After familiarity with the fierce controversies about so many of our Generals, it is good to be here. Since reaching Louisville, I have found scores, if not hundreds of men—both soldiers and civilians—speak of Rosecrans, and all with enthusiastic faith and admiration. Since the great battle, his army has improved vastly. More than 20,000 absentees have been sent forward from Nashville to the front. They still pour in from all the Western States, stimulated by the President's announcement that those away without leave will be punished as deserters.

That penalty means something in this army. Several deserters and spies have been shot. The power which Burnside and our other Commanders sorely needed, but long asked in vain—to punish by death, without submitting each case to the President for approval—it was granted at the last session of Congress. It is absolutely essential to discipline.

Summary dismissal from the service, without waiting for courts-martial, has also had a healthy effect. Rosecrans turned out some 70 incompetent officers in this way; and under this sharp admonition the negligent and careless have brought forth fruits meet for repentance.

The factions have been recipients of equal severity. The first man—a Colonel—who submitted an official stump speech upon "this abolition war," and "fighting for the nigger," was in irons within thirty minutes after his resignation reached headquarters. Three others, for kindred offenses, are still looking wistfully through the grated windows of the Penitentiary at Nashville.

The sick are now sent promptly away from camp to the general hospitals. In short, this command has been weeded out. It is an army not merely on paper, but actually present for duty. It is an army of veterans. Every regiment has been in battle. Some have marched more than 3,000 miles in their checkered campaigning.

Yesterday, I rode past one of Rousseau's brigades, which was out on drill. The dress of the men was neither new nor bright; but how their burnished muskets shone in the sunlight! Their evolutions were admirable; their camps clean and symmetric. They were among the first loyal Kentucky regiments which Rousseau raised in 1861, against the advice of Gen. McClellan, and Prentice, Harney, Garrett Davis, and the other Kentucky politicians, who for two years have devoted their undivided energies to protesting against everything and everybody. These troops have won a good record on many a bloody field; and like all our Kentucky Generals and soldiers who have seen active service, they know what the war means, and accept the logic of events, if their friends at home don't.

Of course I was interested in the looks and bearing of our only General who has actually demonstrated beyond cavil his capacity to handle a great army in the field; to bring victory out of disaster. Gen. Rosecrans is an erect, solid man of 175 pounds weight, whose 43 years sit lightly on his face and frame. He has a clear, mild blue eye, which lights up under excitement until it can flash fire, an intensified Roman nose; high cheek bones; ruddy complexion; mouth and chin hidden under dark brown moustache and whiskers, untouched by the razor; hair a shade or two lighter, with a few threads of silver, and growing thin on the edges of the high, full but not broad forehead. In conversation, his face is illumined by a peculiarly winning smile, and an eye shining with mirth. As [illegible] would take the ghost's word for a thousand pounds, so you would trust that face, in a stranger, as thoroughly true, full of character, and reserved power. His talk is like it; direct, frank, overflowing with humor, or strong in emphasis.

It is gratifying to be told by those who know, that Gen. Rosecrans is not always politic; that he displays rugged characteristics—weak points and strong points. The smooth-headed marvels of propriety, who never say a foolish thing and never do a wise one, who are incapable of enthusiasm and too stupid to make a trivial mistake, may be brilliant martinets; but they are not the stuff of which nature makes her great Generals.

Rosecrans is fortunate in his subordinates. Such men as Thomas, Crittendon, Rousseau, Negley, Stanley, Sheridan, and others under him, would do credit to any army. In his Chief of Staff, Gen. Garfield, he has a strong, earnest man. History will never reveal how many of our promising Generals were ruined by incompetent, ill-chosen staffs. The capacity which some exhibit for bringing about them the wrong men in the wrong places, is absolutely wonderful. I think even the old Napoleon would have proved a failure with Gen. —— for chief of staff and Fitz John Porter as confidential advise.

When will Rosecrans meet the enemy? It may be next week, it may be two months hence. It depends upon conditions which cannot be fully stated here; upon co-operative movements, and somewhat, perhaps, upon the enemy's own course. One of his detachments, under Van Dorn, has been for several days intimating that he would like an encounter with our right, which is near Franklin, and under Gen. Granger. Present indications are that he will be gratified before he is many hours older.

Rosecrans is 220 miles from his trustworthy base of supplies, Louisville. Whenever he moves, the rebels will doubtless cut his communications. It is essential to have an accumulation sufficient for all emergencies, and available for going in any direction. He is not idling. Burnside, with his characteristic promptness, gives him the heartiest co-operation. His troops are splendidly disciplined, of unequaled enthusiasm, full of faith in him and in themselves. Ere many weeks the country will see cause to be prouder than ever of the Army of the Cumberland and its commanding General.

AMONG the papers found in the rebel privateer which was captured just as it was leaving San Francisco harbor, was an oath in which the party taking it bound himself by his "honor as a Southern gentleman" to keep secret, "even from the wife of his bosom," the piratical scheme. A circular was also discovered providing for the capture of Benicia and the two forts commanding San Francisco harbor as a preliminary to the "desire of every Southern man"—the "withdrawal of California from the now contemptible Union."

THE REPORT OF THE WAR COMMITTEE.—The War Committee's report, complete, will make three thousand solid pages, document size. The middle of May or first of June may relieve the Government printing office of this burden—and yet the greater part of the testimony taken is said to have been withheld from publication.
