FRIDAY MORNING, MAY 22.

Copperhead Indignation

Several thousand sympathizers with treason got together at Union Square, in New York, the other day, and raised the loudest howl ever heard in America over the arrest, trial and conviction of VALLANDIGHAM. The speeches, as reported in the World, are more like the ravings of maniacs than the utterances of sane men. The orators were all of the second and third class in the copperhead school, for example, Ryaders, Mullaly, McMasters, McCunn, Tharin, and such like. Fernando Wood, the Brookes, O'Gormon, and other first class leaders had sagacity enough to stay away from so absurd a demonstration. "Freemen," said one speaker, "how are you to save your liberties?" "By fighting," was the response. "Yes, if necessary, by fighting." Every one of the acts of the Administration indicate the purpose of the Administration to terminate our liberties," roared another, the fool being unable to perceive that the very thing they were then doing was the exercise of unobstructed, unmolested liberty, even to the verge of licentiousness. The fellows seemed to be exceedingly anxious to be arrested; but their own utter insignificance shielded them from all molestation. Their besotted followers yelled, and cursed, and hissed, and groaned, but that was all. The whole thing was mere noise and clamor, and did not rise to the dignity of sedition. In spite of all they could do they were obliged to return to their homes or dens, as the case might be, without having been able to provoke either an arrest or a row.

Speech of John J. Crittenden.

Upon Mr. CRITTENDEN'S nomination to Congress, a few days ago, he delivered a speech replete with the noblest patriotism. We do not by any means agree with all his sentiments; yet old as he is, the prince of conservatives and compromisers as he is, he has kept relatively up with the progress of opinion, and now comes nobly forward to sustain the government in a vigorous prosecution of the war for the Union. In one short energetic sentence he defines his position—"Are you for the country and the Government? I am." He don't stop to ask whether Mr. LINCOLN is the President of his choice or not; for that has nothing to do with the question; but he stands by him as the head of the government. He spoke of the attempt at compromise, in which he himself was the principal actor, and then continued:

"The compromise was rejected; the rebellion and the war followed. It was a rebellion without just cause; so I then thought and so I still think. The Administration up to that time, Mr. Lincoln having been inaugurated, had done nothing of injustice to any section, or State, or individual. Throughout this great land no single individual could be pointed out, in whom the Government had done injustice; no man from whom the Government had taken property, or whose liberties had been encroached upon; no man who had been unjustly imprisoned.

The following paragraph is a sore rebuke to those who cling to party, and who are for surrendering to traitors in order to attain their party ends:

Now, how could I, a native-born Kentuckian, be otherwise than for the war to defend and preserve this glorious Government of ours against the rebellion? I was for the war, and have been a supporter of the war all the time. But I wanted to see nothing ignoble in this contest. I thought that a plain, straightforward, manly way would be best in putting down the rebellion. I wanted no indirection. I looked upon it as a national contest, and desired to see all party feeling abandoned. It was a war of defence on your part. God had given you an inheritance greater than any vouchsafed to any other nation; and should you basely surrender it without a struggle, saying to the rebels, "take it and do as you please with it." That would have been ignominious—the like of which was never heard of in history. It was for the preservation of our Government and our territory, and we should pursue it, regardless of cost and sacrifice. These were my sentiments, and I thought we should pursue the war as a national object, with no mean party scheming. I would have regarded any man who should attempt to divide the people on party questions as a manufacturer, and treated him as such.

In concluding, Mr. Crittenden said:

"The nation will get through its difficulties. We have the power and will to do it, and we shall accomplish it. That great Providence that has made us the standard-bearer of freedom will not permit our Government to go down and leave the world in gloom. I have faith; there is a Divinity above that shapes all our ends, and He will shape the destiny of our nation. Its career has only just begun, and Providence does not permit a half finished work of such momentous proportions to fail and be abandoned; and I trust in God that we, the people, do not intend it. Our hearts must be filled with the noble determination to maintain the integrity of our Government, while we grow greater and greater, mightier and mightier, richer in civilization, grander in prosperity, until our glory shall cover the whole land.

"But you must prepare to fight the rebellion through to the last, no matter whether England or France, or any other power make common cause with them or not. We must fight them all, if need be; and we can whip them all, in the defence of right. I don't want to extend the boundaries of this war—God knows I do not! I have tried to make peace, as long as peace was consistent with national safety. Now, I believe war alone can save us, and war it must be.

* * * * * * * Whether Hooker has recrossed the Rappahannock or not; whether Richmond is taken or not; whether to defeat or victory, my determination is to stand by the measures of the Government, and do all I can to promote a vigorous prosecution of the war.

Those rebel sympathizers who make the support of the war secondary to their support of party, and who, with armed rebellion menacing the life of the nation, clamor for peace and compromise, would do well to emulate the example which Mr. Crittenden has set them.

Rebel Difficulties in Reinforcing Vicksburg.

The rebel papers inform us that heavy reinforcements have arrived near Jackson, Mississippi, from Charleston and from Georgia, whose co-operation with the rebel force at Vicksburg will render the destruction of Grant's army certain. But with Jackson in our possession, it is impossible for rebel reinforcements to reach Vicksburg, and with their railroad communication south and west cut off, it is quite as difficult for troops to reach Jackson, or, indeed, to come within thirty miles of it, at least for some weeks to come.

On the northeast Grierson has destroyed the Mobile and Ohio Railroad at Okolona; on the east he cut the same road at Enterprise, as well as the Southern Mississippi at Chunkey ville, seventy-eight miles from Jackson; on the south he destroyed the bridges, tracks, &c., of the Mississippi Central at Hazlehurst, Bahala, Brookhaven and Summit; burning, also, along the entire line for a distance of over forty miles, all the cars, engines and other rolling stock, without which the road, even if repaired, would be useless, and which the rebels cannot replace. Thus reinforcements to reach Vicksburg, must march long distances through a county which has been swept clean of supplies, and must, moreover, fight almost constantly. Now, if Grant in the open field before Vicksburg is possible to form a junction with Pemberton at the rebel stronghold.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Mail Dispatches to the Pittsburgh Gazette.

WASHINGTON, May 20, 1863.

FACILITIES FOR RELIEF OF SOLDIERS.

The vexatious difficulties heretofore experienced by State agents, private physicians, &c., in getting to a field of battle after an engagement, are either smoothed or turned into a new channel by the following paragraph from an order of the War Department, just issued:

"Transportation for private physicians and nurses to attend sick and wounded soldiers will be provided by the Quartermaster's Department, upon the special order of the General commanding the Department, or an army on the field."

INVALID CORPS.

An order from the War Department announces that "the following uniform has been adopted for the Invalid Corps:

"Jacket—Of sky blue kersey, with dark blue trimmings, cut like the jacket for United States cavalry, to come well down on the loins and abdomen.

"Trousers—Present regulation sky blue.

"Forage Cap—Present regulation."

HAMMOND'S BULL AGAINST CALOMEL.

The following is the full text of the Surgeon General's "Bull" against calomel and tartar emetic, of which a synopsis has already been given by telegraph:

"Surgeon General's Office,
Washington, D. C., May 4, 1863.

"I. From the reports of the Medical inspectors and the sanitary reports to this office, it appears that the administration of calomel has so frequently been pushed to excess by military surgeons as to call for prompt steps by this office to correct this abuse; an abuse, the melancholy effects of which, as officially reported, have exhibited themselves not only in innumerable cases of profuse salivation but in the not unfrequent occurrence of mercurial gangrene.

"It seeming impossible in any other manner to properly restrict the use of this powerful agent, it is directed that it be struck from the Supply Table, and that no further requisitions for this medicine be approved by Medical Directors. This is done with the more confidence as modern pathology has proved the impropriety of the use of mercury in very many of those diseases in which it was formerly unfailingly administered.

"II. The records of this office having conclusively proved that diseases prevalent in the army may be treated as efficiently without tartar emetic as therewith, and the fact of its remaining on the Supply Table being a tacit invitation to its use, tartar emetic is also struck from the Supply Table of the army.

"No doubt can exist that more harm has resulted from the misuse of these agents, in the treatment of disease, than benefit from their proper administration."

"W. A. HAMMOND,
"Surgeon General."

VIRGINIA WASTE LANDS.

The farms of the Arlington flats, immediately west of this city, which have been lying idle since the commencement of the war, through the absence of the proprietors in "Rebeldom," are about to be put to use. The contrabands who have been supported by the Government through the last winter, by order of General Heintzelman will be removed thither, and instead of consumers will become producers.

The Late Bogus News About the Capture of Richmond.

The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Commercial writes:

An investigation has been had into the origin of the taking-of-Richmond stories, which so convulsed the entire North but a week since, and it turns out that the whole thing was a pure invention for which the Government and the telegraph were not in any wise responsible. The report originated in the train of a Philadelphia broker, who went from Washington and palmed off his "information" upon the too susceptible Philadelphia Inquirer, who in turn bulletined it as coming from a Washington correspondent of the paper. The Philadelphia evening journals copied it, and added to it as coming from "private sources," the confirmatory street reports which were so speedily gotten up on the publication. An attempt was made to telegraph the printed copy to New York, but the War Department prohibited it, and it was sent through on a late train to New York by a special messenger. Thence it was telegraphed by the Independent Telegraph Company to Boston, &c., an order prohibiting its transmission over the other lines having been issued. From Philadelphia it was sent West over a railroad line. The simple result of the whole matter shows that it was a bold movement for speculative purposes, which a too strict telebraphic censorship gave a wide berth for circulation.

Rosecrans' Army Preparing to Strike.

A late letter from Gen. Rosecran's army, published in the Philadelphia Press, says:

"The army of the Cumberland just now is actively engaged in making preparations for the great struggle, which is apparently not far distant.

"There is at present but little sickness among the soldiers here, especially among the old troops. I never saw the men in better spirits. The rank and file have the greatest confidence in the commanding general (Rosecrans), and all look forward to the future with brilliant hopes and confident anticipations of victory. As a whole, the army is in as good fighting condition, or as well prepared to meet the enemy as now. Thoroughly disciplined, well-armed, clothed and equipped, and fired by the most patriotic devotion to the cause in which we are engaged, we certainly will not disappoint the just expectations of our friends, of that you may be assured. We are united as one man, and with brave hearts and willing hands, are determined, when an opportunity offers, to strike such a blow as will cause the sham fabric of the Southern Confederacy to tremble to its very foundation."

Results of Gen. Dodge's Expedition in Alabama.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette furnishes the following in reference to Gen. Dodge's recent expedition into Alabama:

On his return Gen. Dodge literally swept the country of provisions and forage, live stock and negroes. It is estimated that he burned one and a half millions of bushels of corn, much of which was shelled for transportation to the army; captured and destroyed 500,000 lbs. of bacon; 1,000 head of horses and mules, and an equal number of cattle, hogs and sheep, beside supplying the whole command with meat for three weeks. He also burned every flatboat from Savannah to Decatur, on the Tennessee—destroying the railroad and telegraph between Tuscumbia and Decatur, burned five tan yards, six flourishing mills, and finally, afforded the means of escape for 1,600 blacks!!

REBEL ESTIMATE OF GEN. LEE.—A correspondent of the Richmond Enquirer remarks:

"Now that Jackson has fallen, this, our great hero and chieftain, owes to us, if not to himself, to be where the shock of battle cannot reach. Ten thousand, or even one hundred thousand men slain in battle might be replaced, but if Gen. Lee should fall, who could take his place? Echo answers, who?"

THE MUNICIPAL SLAVE CODE IN ST. LOUIS.—A bill has been introduced in the Common Council of St. Louis to repeal the municipal slave code, which, in the present state of affairs, has become virtually obsolete, and which can never be practically revived in that city. The Council has full power over this subject, and the bill will no doubt be passed, and St. Louis thus made a free city indeed.

THIRD EDITION, REVISED AND ENLARGED,

OF

REDFIELD'S

Hand-Book of the U. S. Tax Law,

(With the Critical and Amended Law in full.) For Lawyers, officers of the Revenue, Professional and Business Men, and all who have to pay Taxes. By AMASA A. REDFIELD, Esq., Counsellor-at-Law.

This new edition of the most popular TAX BOOK PUBLISHED is offered to the public with the assurance that it contains the fullest and most accurate information connected with every matter affected by the Excise Law. Everything is given—nothing is omitted. In the preparation of this NEW EDITION the Compiler has been greatly assisted by a number of the most intelligent Collectors and Assessors in different parts of the country; and it is confidently believed that the work is now as near perfect as it is possible to make it.

All of the latest regulations and decisions of the new Commissioner are given.

Several Special Chapters are devoted to the Income Tax.

The Publishers invite a comparison of this work with any other, and believe, in view of the information given, it is by far the best and cheapest book yet offered to the public. One vol., 12 mo., 340 pages, neatly bound. Price, $1 00.

Sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of price.

THE CAPTIVITY OF GEN. CORCORAN.—The only authentic and reliable narrative of the trials and sufferings endured during his twelve months in Richmond, and other Southern cities, by Brig. Gen. MICHAEL CORCORAN, the hero of Fort Sumter. Price, only 50 cents.

MISS MARTHA BROWNLOW; OR, THE HEROINE OF TENNESSEE.—A truthful and graphic account of the many perils and privations endured by Miss Martha Brownlow, the loyal and accomplished daughter of the celebrated Parson Brownlow, during her captivity with her father, in Knoxville. By Major W. D. Reynolds. Price 15 cents.

SIX MONTHS AMONG THE SECESSIONISTS.—A reliable and thrilling narrative of the sufferings and trials of Miss Sarah L. Palmer, a native of Pennsylvania, who, at the opening of its great Southern Rebellion, was teaching school at Knoxville, the home of Parson Brownlow. In this work, Miss Palmer thrillingly depicts the many startling adventures she met with in her flight from the South State, and town to town, of the Confederacy. Also her pursuit, by her disappointed suitor. Price, only 15 cts.

All the above works are beautifully illustrated.

In order that these works, which are filled with the most thrilling incidents, may be placed within the reach of every one, they have been issued in the above style, in order to sell them at such a price as to be within the means of all.

Single copies can be had, post paid, on receipt of price. Address,

JOHN P. HUNT,

MASONIC HALL, FIFTH STREET.

Agents wanted everywhere to sell the above works. my16
