A Pro-Slavery Yankee Captain in Louisiana.

General ULLMAN has published a card in the New Orleans Era, apropos of a case of insubordination, and resistance to the policy of the Government, on the part of a Captain SAWYER, of the Ninth Connecticut Volunteers. He quotes from a report of Captain SAWYER, who states that he had sent one of his men to the parish of St. Bernard for the purpose of bringing forty colored men who had notified him of their wish to join the Fifth U. S. Volunteers, the following account of the reception the recruiting officer met with at the hands of Provost Marshal HOWARD in that parish:

"Arriving at the parish of St. Bernard, I was arrested and conducted before the Provost Marshal, who, using violent invectives against the organizing of colored troops, declared that not a single colored man should leave his district with the intention of rolling himself—saying that God had made the black to work on sugar and cotton, and not to be soldiers. The results I had made were instantly sent to plantations, and I was brought a prisoner under guard to Gen. Dow, who set me at liberty."

General ULLMAN gives the name of this pro-slavery Yankee with a purpose, as will be seen in the following significant lines at the close of his card in the Era:

"The name of this man is Capt. S. W. Sawyer, Ninth Connecticut Volunteers. He shall have the satisfaction of having his name known throughout the loyal States of this Union.

"I have been instructed by the Secretary of War to report to him all such cases. I shall do so.

"It remains to see which will change first, the views or positions of these men."

Democratic State Convention.

A call is published for a State Convention of the Democracy, to meet at Harrisburg on the 17th of June, to make nominations for candidates for Governor and Judge of the Supreme Court, signed by F. W. HUGHES, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee. We quote the concluding paragraph:

The Convention will also give expression to the sentiments of the Democrats of the State, who while their policy would have averted present disasters, will, nevertheless, devote the historic patriotism of our great party to rescue the Constitution and the Union, one from usurpation, and the other from final disruption.

"Their policy?" What policy does Mr. HUGHES mean? Is it the policy of Mr. BUCHANAN, who surrounded himself with traitors, and suffered them to rob the government and tear the Union to pieces before his eyes, he all the time protesting that he had not the power to prevent them? Or is it the policy which Mr. HUGHES announced in his own famous resolution, to permit the work of secession to go on without resistance until all the South had taken itself off, and then "switching" Pennsylvania and other Northern States out of the old into the new Union? By either of these plans the country might have avoided war, and that "great party" might have continued to ply its dirty vocation as the servitor of the slave aristocracy for a long time to come. The ambition and "historic patriotism" of the HUGHES wing of the party have "this extent, no more."

The Situation at Vicksburg--The Natural Defenses of the Rebel Position.

A Memphis correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, writing on the 28th ult., makes some interesting statements as to the condition of affairs at Vicksburg. Among other things he says that the Walnut Hill batteries, for the possession of which General Grant is striving, are "situated on the highest hill in Vicksburg, fully seventy-five feet perpendicular above the gulf below," and he adds:

"I understand there will be no more charging and useless waste of life in the capture of Vicksburg. General Grant has adopted a plan that cannot fail in reducing the city to ruins in less that three weeks from the date of this letter.

"I have just had a conversation with a gentleman direct from Panola, about seventy-five miles from this city. He left that place on Tuesday morning. It was stated and universally believed that General Joe Johnston was in the command of 14,000 men at Jackson, and that his army was being daily increased. All he lacked to make his forces efficient was artillery and ammunition. These are daily expected from Mobile and Charleston.

"Jackson, previously to being abandoned by the Federals, was almost entirely destroyed. All of the machine shops, factories, mills, railroad depot and machinery were burned—the railroad track and bridges torn up. When the Federals left it was a miserable skeleton of its former self."

Port Hudson.

By the arrival of the steamer Columbia at New York on Wednesday, we have accounts from New Orleans up to the 28th ult. Respecting Port Hudson we learn that the close investment of that place cuts off the enemy's supplies entirely, and as he is believed to have been short of provisions previously, the speedy fall of this stronghold was considered to be certain.

The Era, of the 28th, says:

We learn from an authentic source, that the army before Port Hudson is in a satisfactory position, and that everthing promises fair for an important and successful close of the campaign against that stronghold of the rebels.

LORD LYNDHURST celebrated his ninety-first birthday, on the 21st ult., by a family dinner, at which eighteen persons sat down. The London Times says: "Not only from royalty, but from a large circle of admiring friends, his lordship received many testimonials of regard. We understand that the marriage of the Hon. Georgiana Copley, Lord Lyndhurst's youngest daughter, with Mr. De Cane, M. P., will take place at the close of June."

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.—The total subscriptions in the United States to the Atlantic Telegraph stock now amount to $600,000.

Between April 20th and May 15th ten cotton laden vessels were captured off Mobile by our squadron.

The American Prize Courts in the British House of Lords--An Attack and a Defence.

In the English House of Lords, on the 19th ult.,

The Marquis of CLANRICARDE moved for copies of any reports from our consular or diplomatic agents in North America of the decisions or proceedings of the Prize Courts of the United States. A country which professed to be at peace and on terms of amity with us was acting so contrary to the recognized law of nations, in reference to the seizure of ships engaged in conducting the commerce of the country, that it was absolutely necessary for Her Majesty's Government to take more action in the matter than they had hitherto done. At this moment it was impossible to effect insurances upon vessels trading to the western hemisphere, owing to the constant seizures which were being made by the United States cruisers. A vessel was seized, her cargo, worth probably £150,000, was locked up, and if the owners applied to the Government for redress, they were simply told that their case had been referred to Lord Lyons. If there was any hope that the present state of things would soon pass away, or that the United States would evince a greater desire to respect the recognized law of nations, he should wish the Government to make every allowance, but these seizures had now gone on for a considerable time, and he saw no prospect of a more satisfactory state of affairs arising unless the steps taken by Her Majesty's Government were of a more energetic and decisive character. The noble Marquis referred to the seizure of the Labuan, the Adela, the Springbok, the Dolphin, and the Peterhoff, and urged that in each case the capture was clearly illegal, and contrary to international law. He also complained of the course of procedure adopted in the American Prize Courts.

Earl RUSSEL said his noble friend had made a speech containing very grave charges against the American Government and Prize Courts. He had brought, in fact, a charge that the American Government and Courts had set aside the whole international law of the world; that they had given orders inconsistent with international law, and that they had decided upon interrupting British commerce as far as they could. Now, so far from denying the law of nations, Mr. Seward in all his communications had completely acknowledged it, and had said over and over again that there must be a certain and legal cause of capture before a ship was taken. Admiral Milne had been instructed to send a ship or ships-of-war to the neighborhood of Matamoras, in order that British vessels might be protected from unjustifiable seizure. The port of Matamoras was crowded with vessels engaged in commerce, so that it would not appear that the proceedings of the United States cruizers could have had any effect in deterring those who were engaged in legitimate commerce from carrying on their ordinary business. He had referred to the law officers of the Crown almost every case in which there had been a complaint, and they reported that there was no rational ground of objection.

As to the decisions of the prize courts of the United States, they were bound to believe that as the knowledge possessed by these courts of international law was very great, so their impartiality and their wish to do justice must be of the present unquestioned. There could be no doubt that many vessels built for speed were systematically engaged in breaking the blockade, and he was afraid that the moment one of them was seized her owners at once made their appearance at the Foreign Office, and, with all the airs of injured innocence, demanded redress. Referring to the case of the Alabama, the noble Earl denied that that vessel had been fitted out with the cognizance of the British government, and said that there was no wish on the part of this country to interfere unfairly in the contest now going on.

The Earl of Derby concurred with the remarks which had fallen from Earl Russell, and thought we ought not either rashly or hastily to impute to the American courts that they deliberately, and contrary to law and justice, set aside the law of nations. We ought, also, to make every allowance for the natural provocation the Americans must feel at seeing so large a portion of the commerce of this and other countries carried on, notwithstanding the blockade to the Confederate ports.

After some remarks from Lord Cranworth, the motion was withdrawn.

Governor Curtin.

The Philadelphia papers of Tuesday refer with special prominence to the fact that Governor Curtin will not, under any consideration, allow his name to be used in contesting the nomination as a Gubernatorial candidate. This announcement conveys nothing more than what we have heretofore emphatically stated, on the authority of the last message of Governor Curtin to the last Legislature. That message was a solemn and voluntary withdrawal from a contest at a time when the current was largely in his favor; and in order to be true to himself as a gentleman of veracity and honor, we know that Governor Curtin would yield to no persuasion or intrest which might attempt to seduce him from his plighted faith in connection. In corroboration of what the Philadelphia press on Tuesday announced, we can now state that we have the highest authority for assuring not only the personal friends of Governor Curtin, but also those who are candidates for nomination before the ensuing Pittsburgh Convention, that he will positively not be a candidate. He went to Erie a few days since, at the earnest solicitation of personal friends, and by the same authority which assures us that he would not contest a renomination, we were authorized to state that Governor Curtin would so declare himself at the northwest, and thus peremptorily and positively put at rest all agitation or conjecture on the subject.

With the consciousness of having faithfully discharged his duty; with the approval of hosts of friends; with the confidence of his party; with the respect of the national Administration, and with a high official position at his disposal, when he leaves the Executive chair of Pennsylvania, it is not likely that Governor Curtin will again throw himself into the breach to contend for a position which has already wasted his health to a degree which almost endangers his life. Hence his final and positive determination in no sense to allow the use of his name as a candidate. And we repeat, too, that we trust our semi-official authority for thus announcing what is a fixed determination, will put to rest all future speculation or conjecture with regard to Governor Curtin and a renomination.—Harrisburg Telegraph of Thursday.

CAPT. J. H. SPEKE, the discoverer of the source of the Nile, belongs to the 46th Bengal Native infantry. He is about forty years of age, six feet in stature, and possesses great bodily strength. He is the son of Mr. W. Speke, of Jordans, near Ilminster, in Somersetshire. The Captain belongs to an ancient Devonshire family, who, in Henry II's time, spelt their name Espek, and owned Bramford Speke, near Exeter.

VALLANDIGHAM'S SPEECHES.—The New Orleans Era affirms that the speeches of Mr. Vallandigham have been printed as a political text book in the Confederacy. The editor says: "We have seen one of these books, published at Franklin before Gen. Banks' occupation of that place, on wall paper, and advertised for sale at fifty cents per copy.

NORTHWESTERN CHINESE SUGAR MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—This Company, chartered by the last General Assembly of the State of Illinois, with ample and liberal powers, has opened books for the subscription of stock at their office in the city of Cairo, Illinois.
The manufacture of sugar from Sorghum, or the Chinese Sugar Cane, and the yield of ramie, or of not fabulous profit from the article even at ordinary market rates, are facts which now admit of the fullest demonstration. As Southern Illinois, in point of climate and soil, is admirably adapted for the growth of the cane, and as the cultivation of the cane already forms a great feature in the agricultural pursuits of the people, the fitness of the location for the factory will be readily conceded.
It is the purpose of the Company to erect and have in operation a large factory before the close of the present season; and with a view to aid in that purpose, subscriptions of stock are solicited on the following terms: Shares One Hundred Dollars each; twenty-five dollars at the time of subscription, and the balance in quarterly payments. A receipt will be given for each installment, and when the full sum is paid a certificate of stock, bearing the signature of the President and Secretary of the Company, will be issued.
The success of this enterprise, when once started, is beyond question. The President of the Company has had much experience in European countries, also in the erection of factories; and the manufacture of sugar, and it is abundantly satisfied that no field of operation has ever seen more promises better than this. So fully satisfied is he of success, that for one he will oppose the sale of a single share of stock at any price, however high, after enough has been taken to erect and put in operation the first factory.
Office of the company, Commercial Avenue, near the Post Office, Cairo, Illinois.
