In this work Professor Draper has completely elaborated the argument of which he read an abstract at the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Belence, held in Oxford in 1860. Even in that abstract, enough was presented to show that the views of the author were neither real nor crude, as are those of so many of the 'philosophic' writers of our time, who have taken new stand-points,—but, on the contrary, are such as have resulted from long, and patient, and intelligent study of the great subject, which had, by an entirely natural procession of thought, from Dr. Draper's scientific stand-point, (as shown in his former abis werk on "Human Physiology,") evolved itself to his mind—driviting him, so to speak, to color and collate the historical evidence which he has in se masterly a manner, in so when the part of feesible a stellar and subtraction of the Descritor.

ing, we learn that two brigades of Pleasan ton's cavalry, under command of General Buford, made a reconncisance to Culpepper, and had one of the most obstinate cavity fights that has securred during the war. The force was composed of Gen. Buford's brigade and another cavalry brigade, under Col. Davis, supported by two batteries and two regiments of infantry.

At 12½ o'clock on Monday night the cavalry bivoucked near Beverly Ford, on the bank of the river. At 3 o'clock next morning they were called, and they crossed the river. Beyond the ford was a semi-circle belt of woods within range of the ride-pits, near the edge of the timber, and a lime of plakets guarded the ford and the southern bank of the river.

guarded the ford and the southern bank of the river.

The 8th New York cavalry crossed first and drove the pickets back to the rifes pits. The cavalry then charged directly through the rifes pits and after a desperate combat cleared the woods of the enemy, falling back on their strillery and maintaining the position until 12 o'clock, when eur artillery came up and they were driven back six miles in the direction of Onlpepper, when our forces recrossed the river in good order. Nearly all the fighting was done by eavalry, and was of the bloodlest character, mostly hand-to-hand, with sabre and pistol. In the woods the heavy timber was not very dense, so that horses could advance through it, but the undergrowth was thick, and when a trooper dropped he was entirely concealed. Our loss was considerable, and the slaughter of the rebels fearful. The numbers of casualties on both sides are not yet reported. By this sudden and brilliant dash of our cavalry into the enemy's lines their plans have been frustrated and the intended raid by Stnart's cavalry prevented.
