The most interesting and instructive work ever issued from the Amarican press. Mr. Headley is eminently fitted for the preparation of a work of this character. Ho is acknowledged to be the most rigorous and graphic writer of Military Historyin the languags. He devotas his whole time and carsy to the work, speading some periton of his time with the army, and his outensive acquaitances and correspondence give halm peculiar advantages for obtaining information. Unbiased by party and un-infusenced by politicians, he writes from the stand-point of a patriotic and impartial historian. With his facilities for obtaining ficts, and his won-derful jowers of condenation, he is emabled to fur-inces, in a sma i compass. Avoiding dry details--toious or defonted documents, extracts and doubtful reperta-he combines facts in his own peculiar and materiy atyle, making overy page glow with the fiscluint of a rimance, as the readers of his first volume will testify.
