An Appeal to Manhood.

We trust that our citizens have at length come to see, in its true light, the duty we have been endeavoring to point out to them for some days past. Indeed, the difficulty to be overcome was not one arising out of any denial of that duty—for no one disputed or doubted, that under certain circumstances, the people ought to organize and prepare to meet and repel any attempt of the enemy to invade our soil. The whole question and difficulty just resolved itself practically into the denial of another thing—that such circumstances as would render a military organization, and the construction of fortifications, and in general, the setting on foot of a system of home defence necessary, did not exist. It was in vain to urge that, while the advance of the rebel army for the purpose of occupying this portion of Pennsylvania, had become more and more difficult and improbable since their loss of Western Virginia, yet to such leaders as STUART and LONGSTREET, with a cavalry force no greater than has often appeared in West Virginia, the enterprise of riding through Western Pennsylvania, and sacking Pittsburgh, would not, by any means, be a formidable one.

But what would have been vain to urge but yesterday, or, at any rate, last week, needs no urging now,—for all men that have eyes to see and ears to hear, realize now the imminence of the danger. Would that we could say, that all are equally ready and inspired with the right spirit to meet it. Still, a good beginning has been made, and almost one good day's work has been done already.

Fellow-citizens, we call upon you to see that a full day's work shall be done to-day. What! shall the companies and regiments that are formed, remain for a single hour incomplete, when our young men have heard that the foe is actually within the borders of Pennsylvania, and on the directest way to capture our city and desolate our homes? What! shall we have to blush for the manhood of some, who have youth, and health, and strength—but who have not the spirit to strike a blow for their country?—who would sooner see their sisters outraged and the sanctuaries of their homes made the revelling places of a drunken and licentious horde of rebels, than act the part of honest and brave men, who would at once rush to arms to avert such unutterable shame and horror?

But we are 'persuaded of better things' —and shall not believe that there is one such coward—one such base-hearted coward—in every ten thousand of our population.

Delaware.

The great Union Mass Meeting at Dover on Tuesday was presided over by Gov. CANNON, and addressed by JAMES M. SCOVEL, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, HENRY WINTER DAVIS, Gen. ROB'T. C. SCHENCK, and others. The Hon. N. B. SMITHERS reported the platform, which was unanimously adopted as follows:

Resolved, By the loyal people of the State of Delaware, in mass assemblage met, that in this contest we know no issues except the preservation or destruction of the American Union; that we recognize no parties save those that are for our country or against it.

Resolved, That there is no interest which is not subservient to the public good, no right of person or property which is not subordinate to the public safety.

Resolved, That to the Administration is intrusted the maintenance of the unity of the Great Republic, and that this war should not terminate until the flag of the United States shall wave in undisputed supremacy over the whole land.

Resolved, That to this end we invoke the National Government to employ all the means in its power, having regard only to the usages of civilized warfare.

Resolved, That we can ill not at its measures, nor embarrass its operations by collateral issues; but, having full confidence in its integrity and capacity, and asking only that it shall save the national life, at whatever cost of men and money, we pledge to its support the co-operation of our arms, our means, and our votes.

These are noble words, worthy of the State of CÆSAR RODNEY. They are the words of the people of what, until this war, was classed among the Slave States; and although a few people are still held in bondage there, the day of complete disfranchisement of emancipation, of abolition has come. Let 'Little Delaware' henceforth be equated among the free States.

The speaking at the meeting was admirable, and by the right class of men—men of Maryland, who, like those of Delaware, are casting the cords of slavery from them, and Gen. SCHENCK, of Ohio, a State whose soil was never polluted with the foot-print of an involuntary resident slave, but which is disgraced by having the name of traitor, a facile tool of slaveholders and rebels, proposed as a candidate for Governor, Hon. WINTER DAVIS spoke at length and with great power. We quote a single paragraph:

"The slavery malaria still rests over the head of Delaware. It indisposes you to action, to every manly resolve. Unconsciously you are suffering in the atmosphere. My friends of Delaware, you must clear yourself of that malaria before your hearts are right with the nation. There was a time when men were ashamed to avow that they were abolitionists. I am not ashamed to avow it. [Tremendous applause.] When the rebellion took up the sword for slavery, I took up the sword against slavery. [Renewed cheering.] One of the best acts of Mr. Lincoln was his message advising the people of the Border States to shuffle off the mortal coil of slavery, and to come out into the light and life of freedom and happiness. [Cheers.] If the slaveholders of Maryland are not willing to receive compensation for their negroes, we will take them without compensation. [Applause.] They refused once to receive compensation, let the matter rest there. They put their negroes at their own valuation. I will take them at mine, and that's nothing." [Applause.]

At the close of Mr. DAVIS' speech, Col. WILMER, of the Sixth Delaware regiment, proposed three cheers for the emancipation of Delaware," which were given vociferously.

Judge BOND, of Baltimore, followed in a short and humorous speech, defending the emancipation policy and other measures of the administration, and introducing many illustrations, which were received with great satisfaction.

The closing speech was made by General SCHENCK. In the course of his remarks he said:

"You people of Delaware have memories. We of the West have hopes. But our memories and hopes concern the same subject. One of your best memories is that which reminds you that here, upon the spot where we now stand, a tory named Cheney Cloud was hung, during the Revolutionary war, for his hostility to our fathers. He deserved to be hung. Then what, in the name of God, would you say of the scoundrel who would now, when these institutions have ripened which our fathers suffered so much to establish, arise to strike them down, and deprive us of our nationality? Cheney Cloud was a gentleman and patriot compared with the copperhead of this day. [Applause.] I hold that in these times there is no middle ground. He who does not give his influence for his country that far fails in his duty, and should be treated accordingly. Treason is a crime—a crime of the blackest character. And if treason be crime, sympathizers with treason are criminals. The sooner we understand that the better.

This meeting adds one more to the numerous testimonies that we have had that no man can be a friend of his country without being an opponent of Slavery. Alike in the Slave States and the Free States this principle is exemplified in every possible form. In Maryland and Missouri the lines are clearly defined—Emancipation and Union on one side, Slavery and Secession on the other; and on that issue their elections have turned, and will continue to turn. In Delaware it is the same, and the same issue will soon divide the people of Kentucky and Tennessee.

In the Free States Slavery and Democracy have become so identified that they must survive or perish together. This accounts for the opposition of the leaders of that party to the war, and to the subjugation of the rebels; for they know very well that if the national arms are successful, Slavery will be utterly abolished—as a political power at once, and as a domestic institution in a short time, and when Slavery falls, down goes their party. Slavery, the Rebel Confederacy and Democracy are in the same boat, and to save one they must save all. A Copperhead is one who would sacrifice his country to save his party.

The Impending Danger.

As the danger becomes imminent, many more of our people are beginning to realize the necessity of organising for the defense of our homes. We were apprehensive that a column of the rebels would strike our border somewhere west of the mountains; and expressed that apprehension in the GAZETTE. Now we have the intelligence that a body of rebels are several miles this side of Cumberland, just about the sources of the Youghiogheny—near enough certainly to arouse all the manhood in this community.

This fearful crisis will make a large and vivid page—perhaps a dark one—in the history of Pennsylvania, and in the traditions of its people; and long years hence it will be asked, who buried his bosom to the foe, and who skulked, in June, 1863? Now, young men, we beg that you will not write for yourselves a record of shame. Go in!—don't wait until dire necessity shall compel the authorities to force you in. This enemy has got to be driven from the soil of our State, and beyond our borders, and you must assist in the work. These cities are to be saved from sack and conflagration; and the man who voluntarily enroll their names in our home army will be honored as long as they live; while those who hold back until they are obliged to go, will have to meet as much danger as the others; but there will be a vast difference in the estimate that men and women will put upon their services. These little individual records will not be lost.

Let our entire male population, of town and country, who have sufficient strength to endure a short campaign, rush to the rescue. There is not a day to be lost. There is no time for making nice calculations as to profit and loss. Let the corn take care of itself; let the shop be closed; let that half-erected house stand; let the goods lie on the shelf; in short, let us have a universal Sabbath as to all work except the one of saving our homes from these ruthless invaders.

Pleading the Rebel Cause.

The Post, of this city, contains yesterday the following editorial notice:

"Morris."

The admirably conceived and written communications of "Morris," addressed to the President of the United States, published in the Post, closes for the present with this morning's number. Our correspondent, as soon as he gets through with pressing engagements, which will occupy all his time for a week or two, will again resume his communications.

The following is a paragraph from "the admirably conceived and written communications" alluded to, "addressed to the President of the United States," and published in Yesterday's Post:

As I read and have always been educated to read the Constitution, you and the rebels are both violating it, and both have essentially the same excuse for it, and clearly suggests that both are equally sinners, and yet both are wrong.

Indeed! Are treason and loyalty so much alike? Is there "essentially the same excuse" for both of them? Let the readers of that very sheet, whose homes are threatened by the invader, ponder these questions.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
WASHINGTON CITY, June 9th, 1863.

ORDER.—(EXTRACTS.)

1. The Department of the Monongahela will embrace that portion of the State of Pennsylvania West of Johnstown, and the Laurel Mountains, and the counties of Hancock, Brooke and Ohio, in the State of Virginia, and the counties of Columbiana, Jefferson and Belmont, in the State of Ohio.

Brigadier General WILLIAM T. H. BROOKS is assigned to the command of this Department. Headquarters at Pittsburgh.

2. A Departmental Army Corps of Volunteer Infantry, Artillery and Cavalry, to be designated the Army Corps of the Monongahela, will be assembled and organized in accordance with regulations of the U. S. service, for the protection and defence of this public property within that Department and will be mustered into the service of the United States, to serve during the pleasure of the President or the continuance of the war.

The company, and Field Officers of the Departmental Corps will be provisionally commissioned by the President.

They will be armed, uniformed, equipped, and while in active service, subsisted and supplied, as other troops of the United States.

Cavalry volunteers may furnish their own horses, to be turned over to the United States at their appraised value, or allowance will be made for the time of actual service at the rate authorized by law.

The Government will mount picked Cavalry, to the extent that horses can be furnished.

The Departmental Corps will not be entitled to bounty, and cannot be paid until Congress makes an appropriation for that purpose.

3. Volunteers in the Departmental Corps may, at their own request, be transferred and mustered into the service for three years or during the war, and upon such transfer and muster they will be allowed the pay and bounty authorized by the act of Congress to volunteers for three years or during the war.

Volunteers in the Departmental Corps will remain subject to enrollment and draft for general service. The enlistment, recruiting and organizing of volunteers, for three years or during the war, is to be systematized and encouraged, the officers to be appointed and manufactured by the Governors of the respective States.

The enlistments herein specified and transfers from the Departmental service to the three years' service, must be reported to the Provost Marshal General, in order that the respective States and Congressional Districts may receive appropriate credit under the Enrollment Act of Congress.

4. All the troops within the Department will be under the command of the General commanding the Department, with the usual Departmental staff.

6. The operations against the enemy are not to be limited by the geographical limits of the Department, but may extend to adjacent territory, as in the judgment of the commanding General may be expedient to resist or pursue the enemy.

Volunteer companies and regiments organized in places not within the Department of the Monongahela, may be attached for temporary service to the Army Corps of the Monongahela, and mustered into the service upon special application and order of the War Department.

By order of the President:
EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, May 21, 1863.

NOTICE.—The attention of all officers who have been honorably discharged on account of wounds or disability, and who desire to re-enter the service in the Invalid Corps, is called to the provisions of General Orders, No. 105, of 1863, from the War Department, published in the papers throughout the country. Such officers are requested to comply promptly with the provisions of that order, and to send their written applications, as therein provided, for position in the Invalid Corps, (stating the character of their disability,) with as little delay as possible, to the Acting Assistant Provost Marshal General of the State in which they may be. Such Acting Assistant Provost Marshal General will at once forward the applications, with his endorsement, to the Provost Marshal General of the State.

Officers for the Invalid Corps will be appointed immediately upon furnishing the papers required by General Order No. 105, of 1863, from War Department. Their pay and emoluments will commence from date of acceptance of such appointment, and not from date of examination at the respective examining boards to which they may be assigned.

By order of the Secretary of War.

(50,000) Fifty-four thousand pounds fresh Beef, necks and shanks to be excluded, all to be of the best quality.

Each bid must be sealed and plainly marked with net weight and tare, and no allowance thereafter allowed. Separate bids will be received for fresh Beef, and for all the other articles above enumerated collectively.

Each bid must be accompanied by a guaranty for the execution of a contract in case the bids be accepted, and good and sufficient security will be required for the due performance thereof. Blank forms of bids and guaranties may be procured on application at this office personally, or by letter or telegraph.

Proposals of bidders must name all the parties to such firm.

The proposals of bidders not in conformity to the above requirements will not be considered.

Bidders must be present when the bids are opened.

The right to reject all bids is reserved.

Bids will be endorsed, "Proposals for Salted Meat Stores," &c.

Having accepted the Agency for the sale of the SEMPLE FIRE BRICK, mined near St. Louis, Mo., I furnish the attention of Glass and Steel Manufacturers to the Analysis given above, as reported by Prof. Cook, of Boston, and J. C. Booth, of Philadelphia, which, together with the test of actual experience by manufacturers in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and St. Louis, determines it to be the purest and most valuable Clay now known, for Foreign or American Fire-brick from it have stood from the Glass Furnaces from 6 to 9 months.

The Analysis is of the Clay as taken from the mine, without any washing or preparation whatever. It possesses great adhesiveness and plasticity qualities, which are not shown by the Analysis, and which admit of the admixture of a large proportion of shell or burned clay.

I am now prepared to fill orders for the above Clay, to be shipped from St. Louis or delivered here.
