NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. Sterne saw in the cage, said only 'I can't get out.' It would have been more 'man't claim on the houselops that I will get out.' It would have been more 'man't claim on the houselops that I will get out.' Another of the New Jersey resolutions.' The sterne Regulars, dated Vicksburg, June 13th, A lister from Capt. D C. Irish, of the Third was an instructive light upon this whole movement, and its objects:

"We are progressing favorably, though the work of attachment to the Union, pledging to its friends, wherever found, our unwavering support, and to its enemies, in whatever guise, our undying hostility, and that, ded willing, we will stand by the Constitution and laws of our country, and under their saored shield will maintain and defend our liberty and rights, "peaceably if we can forcibly if we must." [Great cheering.]

Thus phrase, "wherever found," implies that there are friends of the Union in this Confederacy, and the resolution obligingly pledges to them the support of the New Jersey Democracy—not surely without an equivalent feture.

To the same meeting, den. Fitz John Porter write's a letter, declaring, or course, for the Constitution and resistance to despotition, and ending that:

"We have marched two huncred miles and two huncred miles and found that of the Constitution and resistance to despotition," and ending that:
