In the Grammar Department, in addition to this, was an exercise of another character. The Principal, Prof. Monre, had just presented to the Janitor a handsome present. Sith inst., some persons entered the house of immoney from the pupils, when he is turn was astonished by an gift of a magnificent pitcher of sitverware, with gobiest to correspond. They were chaste, elegant in design, and accompanied by an addrest frem Miss. Mary Russel, one of the graduating class.

The Principal had excellent manterial for a speech, but the whole scene and attendant circumstances mads speech making impossible. He, however, offered some, remarks, thanking all his pupils for this mark of their affection and esteem, and taking leave of his graduating class, whom, as pupils, he is to meet no more. The scene was affecting beyond description, and we think the Principal has great reason to be proud of such an admirable class of children.
