

OFFICIAL. LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES. Passed at the Third Session of the Thirty-seventh Congress.

For military stores, viz: pay of mechanics, repairs of arms, purchase of accoutrements, ordnance stores, flags, drums, files and other instruments, fifteen thousand dollars.

For transportation of officers, their servants, troops, and expenses of recruiting twenty-two thousand dollars.

For contingencies, viz: freight, ferrage, toll, cartage, wharfage, purchase and repair of boats; commissions; judges' salaries; pay for attending courts-martial, courts, of inquiry, and for constant labor; house rent; quarters; burial of deceased marines; printing; stationery; postage; telegraphing; apparatus of gas and water fixtures; water rent, for officers' quarters; beds, sheets, spreads, shovels, axes, picks, carpenter's tools; keys of a horse for the messenger; pay of matrons; repairs of engines; repairs of hospital buildings; repairs of mess tables, and banks; repairs to public carriages; purchase and repair of uniforms, caps, and gaiters; repairs of cooking stoves, and ranges; stores where there are no granges; gravel for parade grounds; repairs of the fortifications; and other purposes, forty-five thousand dollars.

For the construction and repair of vessels of the navy, nine million two hundred and ninety-eight thousand dollars.

For the purchase and building of additional steamers, repairs of existing steamers, vessels, extra labor and materials, and repairs to the construction of said steamers, until after public advertisement for proposals to build the same, published in the city of Washington, D. C., on or before the first day of August, in two daily newspapers of general circulation, published in the city of Washington, D. C., on or before the first day of August, in two daily newspapers of general circulation, published in the city of Philadelphia, prior to such contract being made.

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For construction and repair of machinery for vessels in commission, five million five hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For construction and repair of machinery for vessels in commission, five million five hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For construction and repair of machinery for vessels in commission, five million five hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For construction and repair of machinery for vessels in commission, five million five hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

For repairs of all kinds, twenty-eight thousand eight hundred dollars.

For contingencies and apparatus for the sick and hurt of the navy, including the engineer and marine corps, one hundred and fifty-seven thousand five hundred dollars.

Pittsburgh Gazette. S. RIDDLE & CO. EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

Publication Office No. 54 Fifth Street. CONTAINING THE LATEST NEWS UP TO THE HOUR OF PUBLICATION. MONDAY MORNING, JULY 20.

Col. Misener's Raid in Mississippi. Col. J. Misener, who has been on a raid through Northern and Eastern Mississippi, reports: Broke up the command of Gen. George at Pando; destroyed railroad bridge at the Yokkara, and tracts-work left beyond, and the road from there north...

What Courage May Do. The New York Tribune, speaking of the late riot in that city, says: The mob threatened and approached a house. One man, not its owner, nor his friend, stood before the door to meet them. The leaders rushed forward. Said this man: "You shall not enter this house until you have the right to do so."

After the Battle. A correspondent of the New York Commercial, in a letter from the battle-field at Gettysburg, gives the following account of the day's fighting: While passing along the center of Lee's line, I found a General and his staff, who were looking over the field with a view to throwing away or then if the day was over. Suspecting your correspondent of being an officer, they called him to the front and asked him to see a man and take a line of battle to the right. He was then taken to a man who was killed and a man who was wounded.

How the Rebels Treated American Prisoners. The editor of the Fulton Republican, published at McDonough, Ky., in a letter from the front, says: "I was a prisoner of war for several months, and I can tell you that the rebels treated their prisoners very badly. They starved them, they worked them to death, and they killed them."

Col. Misener's Raid in Mississippi. Col. J. Misener, who has been on a raid through Northern and Eastern Mississippi, reports: Broke up the command of Gen. George at Pando; destroyed railroad bridge at the Yokkara, and tracts-work left beyond, and the road from there north...

What Courage May Do. The New York Tribune, speaking of the late riot in that city, says: The mob threatened and approached a house. One man, not its owner, nor his friend, stood before the door to meet them. The leaders rushed forward. Said this man: "You shall not enter this house until you have the right to do so."

After the Battle. A correspondent of the New York Commercial, in a letter from the battle-field at Gettysburg, gives the following account of the day's fighting: While passing along the center of Lee's line, I found a General and his staff, who were looking over the field with a view to throwing away or then if the day was over. Suspecting your correspondent of being an officer, they called him to the front and asked him to see a man and take a line of battle to the right. He was then taken to a man who was killed and a man who was wounded.

How the Rebels Treated American Prisoners. The editor of the Fulton Republican, published at McDonough, Ky., in a letter from the front, says: "I was a prisoner of war for several months, and I can tell you that the rebels treated their prisoners very badly. They starved them, they worked them to death, and they killed them."

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

Col. Misener's Raid in Mississippi. Col. J. Misener, who has been on a raid through Northern and Eastern Mississippi, reports: Broke up the command of Gen. George at Pando; destroyed railroad bridge at the Yokkara, and tracts-work left beyond, and the road from there north...

What Courage May Do. The New York Tribune, speaking of the late riot in that city, says: The mob threatened and approached a house. One man, not its owner, nor his friend, stood before the door to meet them. The leaders rushed forward. Said this man: "You shall not enter this house until you have the right to do so."

After the Battle. A correspondent of the New York Commercial, in a letter from the battle-field at Gettysburg, gives the following account of the day's fighting: While passing along the center of Lee's line, I found a General and his staff, who were looking over the field with a view to throwing away or then if the day was over. Suspecting your correspondent of being an officer, they called him to the front and asked him to see a man and take a line of battle to the right. He was then taken to a man who was killed and a man who was wounded.

How the Rebels Treated American Prisoners. The editor of the Fulton Republican, published at McDonough, Ky., in a letter from the front, says: "I was a prisoner of war for several months, and I can tell you that the rebels treated their prisoners very badly. They starved them, they worked them to death, and they killed them."

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

Col. Misener's Raid in Mississippi. Col. J. Misener, who has been on a raid through Northern and Eastern Mississippi, reports: Broke up the command of Gen. George at Pando; destroyed railroad bridge at the Yokkara, and tracts-work left beyond, and the road from there north...

What Courage May Do. The New York Tribune, speaking of the late riot in that city, says: The mob threatened and approached a house. One man, not its owner, nor his friend, stood before the door to meet them. The leaders rushed forward. Said this man: "You shall not enter this house until you have the right to do so."

After the Battle. A correspondent of the New York Commercial, in a letter from the battle-field at Gettysburg, gives the following account of the day's fighting: While passing along the center of Lee's line, I found a General and his staff, who were looking over the field with a view to throwing away or then if the day was over. Suspecting your correspondent of being an officer, they called him to the front and asked him to see a man and take a line of battle to the right. He was then taken to a man who was killed and a man who was wounded.

How the Rebels Treated American Prisoners. The editor of the Fulton Republican, published at McDonough, Ky., in a letter from the front, says: "I was a prisoner of war for several months, and I can tell you that the rebels treated their prisoners very badly. They starved them, they worked them to death, and they killed them."

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

Col. Misener's Raid in Mississippi. Col. J. Misener, who has been on a raid through Northern and Eastern Mississippi, reports: Broke up the command of Gen. George at Pando; destroyed railroad bridge at the Yokkara, and tracts-work left beyond, and the road from there north...

What Courage May Do. The New York Tribune, speaking of the late riot in that city, says: The mob threatened and approached a house. One man, not its owner, nor his friend, stood before the door to meet them. The leaders rushed forward. Said this man: "You shall not enter this house until you have the right to do so."

After the Battle. A correspondent of the New York Commercial, in a letter from the battle-field at Gettysburg, gives the following account of the day's fighting: While passing along the center of Lee's line, I found a General and his staff, who were looking over the field with a view to throwing away or then if the day was over. Suspecting your correspondent of being an officer, they called him to the front and asked him to see a man and take a line of battle to the right. He was then taken to a man who was killed and a man who was wounded.

How the Rebels Treated American Prisoners. The editor of the Fulton Republican, published at McDonough, Ky., in a letter from the front, says: "I was a prisoner of war for several months, and I can tell you that the rebels treated their prisoners very badly. They starved them, they worked them to death, and they killed them."

For the purchase of various articles of equipment, namely, articles, and anchors, and stores, in the masters' boatswain, and sailmaker's departments, two million dollars.

For provisions for commission, warrant, and petty officers and seamen, including rations and medical supplies to vessels at sea service, five million four hundred and seventy thousand seven hundred and seventy dollars.

WALLACE & CURTIS. COMMISSION MERCHANTS. DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM.

DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET. DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET.

DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET. DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET.

DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET. DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET.

DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET. DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET.

DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET. DEALERS IN CRUDE & REFINED PETROLEUM. No. 4 NORTH BRIDGE STREET.