Pittsburgh Gazette.

TUESDAY MORNING, JULY 21.

We have seen nothing in the way of efturn upon the loyal newspapers and say: "See there, what you have done! This is den and heat of the day, which is how near all your work! We told you this would be its close. having tried in vain to frighten the people from voting for Lincoln, by threatening so?" It is the new gospel of Demogracy, which is to perpetuate the rule of the mob. by threatening rapine and revolt whenever they are voted down by the majority of Peace.

While we recognize, however, the necessity of repressing such entbreaks with a strong hand, it is always to be regretted an article full of the most virulent copperhead when the punishment falls only on the head of the ignorant and deluded masses—the blind dupes and instruments of the wickedness of worse but wiser men. There is a Nemesis in these cases which would have brought home a "bloody instruction" to the trading aristocracy of parvenus who fostered these disturbances by their encouragement of such newspapers as the Herald, nately for them, been checked in their incipient stage. The actual victims are the poorest and most ignorant classes, as well is, to succeed in getting up even the briefest true criminals, the editors of these incendiary sheets, and their aristocratic patrons, are allowed to go unscathed, though both equally guilty. There ought to be some remedy for this. If the friends of order had completed their work by cleaning out these nurseries and magazines of treason and of all the crimes which it engenders and dealt with their proprietors just as they | -as the New York attempt at insu dealt with their less guilty instruments, they would have extirpated the cause of burgh fost do? What could it do, when it offense by striking at its root. What is was left as solitary as a rubbing post in an unthe use or justice of shooting down the ing a more poetical and equally apposite six murderer on the streets, while the more cowardly assassin, who skulks behind a wall and instigates and inflames him to deeds of blood and rapine, is allowed to escape unharmed, and to continue hi work? He cannot say that he did not meditate murder, or arson, or burglary, when he organized revolt. These results are natural and inevitable sequences, and he ought to answer for them as fully as though his own delicate hands were dyed with the did-but for all that, they could not accom-

Terence's comedy might be rewritten in this country-and with still more striking effect than it could derive from things drawn to the life when it was written in the days of ancient Rome. In this art (of self-torment) the modern American citizen is an overmatch for the uncomfort able mortal so familiar to us in our schoolboy days, in the play we have referred to As an instance, we may just cite the deliberate self-cruelty of many of our friends, to whom fortune has, in the late draft, paid a left-handed compliment. Instead of making the best of it, as common sense would advise them to do, they deliberately net about making the very worst of it. We hear of several who cannot, or do not wish to go personally, paying from $100 to the effect that "any person drafted may to $200 more for exemption than the law of Congress and the Executive Gov ernment, acting under that law, have fixed as the amount of burden imposed on a drafted citizen. Certainly the man who cannot, or who does not wish to render pera good and patriotic citizen in reference to the present emergency, by paying three hundred dollars, or by providing a substi-
