Fratoraization. All accounts agree that the federal and rebel forces at Port Hadson, immediately upon our compation of the pisce, frateraized in the kindest possible manner, apparently forget-ting saturely that they had ever been arrayed in hostile columns. It was precisely hus, also, at Vicksburg, at Gettyburg, and on every other field where the man have been brought together in the hush or at the slose of conflict. Those persons who are fond of lassisting that the people of the South and these of the North can never be receasiled or live together in pasce when the war is done and the spirit of rebellon is destroyed, will hardly find in facts like these we have cited a confirmation of their argument.
