Death of Mr. Crittenden, of Kentucky.

The Hon. JOHN J. CRITTENDEN died at his residence near Frankfort, Ky., on Sunday morning. He had been ill for some days, and his son, Major General Thomas L. Crittenden, commanding a corps in Gen. Rosecrans' army, was summoned to his bedside. Gen. Crittenden came north on the same train which bore Major General McCook to his father's funeral.

John Jay Crittenden was born in Woodford county, Kentucky, about 1786, and was the son of a farmer who was killed while his son was still very young, by the fall of a tree, leaving his widow, whose means were slender, to bring up a large family.

Mr. Crittendan commenced the practice of law at Hopkinsville, but soon removed to Frankfort, where he enjoyed an excellent practice and won distinction as an advocate. After having been for some time a member and Speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives, he was elected to the United States Senate, taking his seat December 1, 1817, serving two years.

From 1819 to 1835 Mr. Crittenden continued in the practice of law at Frankfort; and in 1828 was nominated Judge of the Supreme Court by President Adams, but the Senate refused to confirm him, and Judge McLean filled the place. In 1835 he was again elected Senator, this time for six years. On the conclusion of his term of office he was re-elected, but resigned to become Attorney General under President Harrison. He held his office but six months, tendering his resignation to President Tyler in a brief and dignified letter. All the Cabinet except Mr. Webster retired with him. Mr. Clay having resigned his seat in the Senate in March 1843, Mr. Crittenden was chosen to fill his term, and in 1843 was re-elected for a full term. He resigned in 1848, and was elected Governor of Kentucky. He was Attorney General under President Fillmore, and afterwards returned to the Senate where he remained till March, 1861.

Since this time he has been a member of the House of Representatives, and at the period of his death was a candidate for re-election. His opposition to the Lecompton Constitution, and his course since the outbreak of the present troubles, are so well-known to our readers that it is not necessary to enter into details. Mr. Crittenden was always an excellent extemporaneous debater, and even in his advanced age, the spirit of his youth had not greatly abated. Mr. Crittenden was earnestly devoted to the service of his country, and the purity of his intentions was never doubted.

About the Cabinet--Denial of the Herald's Peace Story--A Little Squall--The President Conservative--The Cabinet a Unit on Slavery and Peace--Emancipation Decisive or by a special Enactment.

A Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune, writing on Saturday, says:

Much has been said and written on the subject of Mr. Lincoln and his Cabinet in regard to "peace" and "reconstruction." Each writer promulgates a new role in the Cabinet, and each member is compelled to act a conservative or radical part as the fancy of the writer dictates. Many of these Cabinet "situation" articles have been ingenious, but few of them have been true.

A DENIAL FLAT.

The late famous, or in-famous attempt to belie the Cabinet in the Herald was, probably, the most absurd pronunciamento ever put out upon the public, and, just here, I am authorized by a member of the Cabinet, who offered the writer to reiterate a few of its points in his hearing, to say it is totally false, fully and conclusively. The Cabinet, under no circumstances, have ever discussed in public session the idea of offering peace, on any basis, to rebels in arms. There has been no serious division in the Cabinet on the subject of peace or slavery, and far from it, truth is the report, that there has been a Cabinet imbroglio. Furthermore, the Cabinet will not entertain or consider propositions of peace while a rebel is in arms against the Government.

A LITTLE SQUALL.

The hottest discussion the present Cabinet ever indulged in, was on the wording of the Emancipation Proclamation, and on this occasion the President was the conservative party. Mr. Seward urged on this occasion that no restrictions should be made in the application of the proclamation, but that its application should be universal. Secretaries Chase and Stanton urged the same wording, but the President chose to restrict Norfolk and numerous other districts, thereby confining the proclamation to districts in open rebellion against the Union.

THE CABINET A UNIT.

On the subject of Slavery and its ultimate fate at the end of the war the Cabinet is a unit, only differing as to the means by which emancipation shall be brought about. Messrs. Chase, Stanton, Welles, and Usher are of the opinion that Slavery should cease in all sections, whether covered by the Proclamation or not, at the end of the war; while Messrs. Blair, Seward and Bates claim that it would be impolitic to make such a radical change—that the interests of "political economy demand that emancipation should be gradual. To this effect these gentlemen favor the idea that all colored people remaining in Slavery at the end of the war shall be gradually freed by special enactments. No Cabinet harbors for a moment the idea of reconstructing the Union on a basis of Slavery, and no flag of truce has been or will be entertained from disheartened Rebel leaders which foreshadows an idea in conflict with the Emancipation Proclamation.

A Baltimore letter says that President Garrett, of the B. & O. Railroad, is busy in arranging for reopening the road from Harper's Ferry to Cumberland. Two of the bridges east of the Cumberland are up, and the track over the Harper's Ferry Viaduct was completed on Monday evening. He says if Meade will drive the rebels back beyond Winchester at once, the road will be open for travel and transportation in two weeks' time. The upper dams are all ready, and the stone contracted for to build the new bridge across the south branch of the Potomac at Laurel, on the Washington branch. The stone is to be widened fifty per cent., so as to prevent future disasters from floods. The bridge will cost $70,000 or more.

Apropos.

The Richmond Dispatch of the 17th, in a review of the recent losses and crosses, of the Confederacy, makes use of the subjoined quotation:

What though the field be lost?
All is not lost! The unconquerable will,
And study of revenge, immortal hate,
And courage never to submit or yield,
And that glory to triumph!

This is the language of Milton's Devil!

Gen. George Washington L. Bickley, M. D., C. C. K. G. C.

The recent incarceration in the military prison at Louisville, Ky., of Doctor, and by courtesy, Gen. George W. L. Bickley, will recall to many of our citizens, and especially to hotel keepers, the grand commander of the Knights of the Golden Circle, as he appeared when he visited this city several years ago, to establish the order in this great metropolis, and is a fitting episode in a rather eventful career. Born near Winchester, Va., he claims descent from one of the first families whose mythical ancestor was a certain ancient Beauleigh, or big-nose, who flourished in England many hundred years ago, but whose name and achievements do not appear in ordinary books of heraldry. Left an orphan at a very early age, and with a very slender patrimony, the last action of this illustrious house ran away from Virginia, and after numerous adventures, became a cotton and negro broker in New Orleans—made money—returned to Virginia—attended college—studied medicine—married a wealthy woman—spent her fortune—became a widower—took some part in the Mexican war—settled at Cincinnati, Ohio—got up a grand eclectic college and became one of its professors—wrote several very desirable medical works—married another wealthy woman—spent her fortune—is said to have taken out military supplies to Russia during the Crimean war—established numerous Lone Star associations in Cincinnati and other Western cities—visited England and France—got up a grand project to publish a scientific and mechanical paper in connection with a patent agency—made a very good paper and sold out to advantage—got a grant of lands in Chiapas and other Mexican states, from Indian chieftains—got a grant of coal mines from somebody in the Dominican republic, and organized a company to work them—claimed to have a grant of certain mining privileges with Russian ports and proposed a company to take advantage of them—got up a scheme to realize a fortune by raising the market value of Arkansas state bonds—attained a good medical practice and was concerned in a medical establishment for preparing and supplying pure drugs and certain patent medicines—issued a prospectus and obtained large subscriptions for the establishment of a grand Southern college that should free the chivalrous South from dependence on Yankee teachers—organized, with Gen. Quitman and Hon. Wm. L. Yancy, the order of the Knights of the Golden Circle—came to New York, dressed in conspicuous military clothes, cap and plume, and accompanied by sundry lieutenants and attaches, who all fared sumptuously—boarded at the St. Nicholas; and subsequently at the Metropolitan—organized several of the Lodges of the Knights of the Golden Circle—tried to purchase a steam vessel to carry the Knights to Mexico, but failed, George Law didn't see things in the same light as he did—attended a grand convention of the Knights at White Sulphur Springs, Virginia, and distinguished himself by threatening to slaughter certain dissentients—went to Mexico and ascertained, as practicable modes of taking the castle of San Juan de Ulloa with five hundred men—opened communication with Juarez and Miramon, the opposing Mexican chiefs of the radical and church parties, but neither of them would take any bargain until a certain number of neutral settlers should be placed on Mexican soil—returned to the city, and offered very liberal terms for a steamship to be used in taking the castle of San Juan de Ulloa, but the owners of steam vessels did not like to—opened negotiations with English bankers who controlled English claims against Mexico who thought the Knights of the Golden Circle a good speculation, provided the English debts were guaranteed by a certain number of American settlers first located in Mexico—became pecuniarily involved by indebtedness to parties who had advanced money and war material to aid the colonization of Mexico by the Knights—was compelled to do something, and determined on the desperate project of an invasion of Mexican territory from the North—summoned the Knights to meet in Mississippi and Texas for this invasion—was checked by the proclamation of the President of the United States—saw a means of escape from social disgrace by going in for Southern secession—returned his man over to form the nucleus of a Southern army—re-organized the constitution of the Knights of the Golden Circle, and changed its purpose to completely that it became a mere official instrument of the traitorous rebellion—disseminated the traitorous Knights' organization extensively in Ohio and Indiana—was caught at New Albany, Indiana, and is now deservedly in prison.

Dr. Bickley is nearly fifty years of age, but does not look near so old. He is a small man, with pleasant manners, and a lively, nervous-gun genuine temperament.

His order had at one time 17,000 men willing to go out as actual settlers in Mexico, and there is no doubt that Dr. Bickley was sincerely devoted to that project, and to becoming himself the head of a great military republic modeled after that of Louis Napoleon, of whom Dr. Bickley is a great admirer, and with whom he, on several occasions, negotiated.—*N. British Patience.

In the British Parliament, on the 10th of July, the case of Mr. Beltman, a British subject residing in Alabama, was brought up. Beltman, for refusing to join the rebel army, was in April last shipped three or four times in a tank of water, and on coming to the surface each time, asked if he would serve. At last, for fear of being drowned, he consented to serve under protest. The affair reached the ears of the British Consul at Richmond, and he remonstrated, but to no effect, and the man could not be heard from. Mr. Layard said that this was but one of the many cases of the kind, and it was for remonstrating against them that the General at Richmond was ordered to leave the Confederacy. His (Mr. L.) was bound to say that these acts were committed by persons apparently acting under the general authority of the Confederate government, but at a distance from the seat of government. The further consideration of the matter was postponed.
