A New Device of the Enemy.

We published, without remark, a notice of a proceeding in equity, before the Judges of the Supreme Court of this State, in Philadelphia, to test the validity of the Conscription act, by means of an injunction to stay proceedings under it. There is more, however, in this matter than meets the eye. It is instituted by Ingersoll, Wharton and Biddle, the last named being, as we understand, the Governor's special friend, and late Democratic member of Congress from that city, and all of them of that class of men who are opposed to the successful prosecution of the war. The forum selected is the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, counting four out of its five Judges from that class, and amongst them the Copperhead candidates for Governor and Judge—Woodward and Lowrie—both reckless and disloyal, and utterly regardless of principle and authority whenever they have a point to carry. The other two are little better. The same gentlemen have already disfranchised the soldier by declaring that he cannot vote. The next obvious step is to deny him reinforcements, and therefore it is no doubt that they are now called upon to finish the job by declaring the Conscription Act to be unconstitutional. It is the same game precisely that has been played so unsuccessfully by Seymour in New York; and these men, although candidates for office, retain their seats on the Bench by the desire of the party, with a view to the services which they are expected to render in embarrassing the Government. We give them notice that they will be watched and headed if they attempt to play any such pranks here.

Release of Gen Stuart's Negroes.—A Baltimore Slave-Pen Cleared Out.

A letter from Baltimore to the New York Evening Post, dated July 28, gives the following account of the release of the imprisoned negroes of the rebel General Stuart:

The release of the slaves of the rebel General Stuart from a slave-pen in Pratt street, in this city, was attended by some interesting incidents. Col. Birney having applied for authority to visit the place and confiscate Stuart's "property," an order to that effect arrived yesterday, and in the afternoon the Colonel proceeded to the prison, showed his order, entered, and locking the doors behind him, entered the court yard first, and then visited the cells. In this place sixty persons were confined, some of them having been there over three years. To be imprisoned there, Marshall Kane says, is worse than to be in the world, to forget almost what trees and flowers and green fields were, to be deprived even of the cool breezes of heaven, was bad enough; but there was worse than this.

The hall, the chain, the shackles were not wanting to make the lives of these poor creatures more miserable. Sixteen men were bound together with shackles at the ankles, others were chained two by two, and one old man had his legs fastened together by shackles connected by chains bound to his waist. The poor wretches were all terribly frightened when called up by the Colonel. They thought he had come to buy them and take them South, as it seems they had been told by their masters to await either the "the Union as it was," or a good chance for shipment to the South. They were soon assured, however, and a shackle-smith had been sent for, the chains and shackles speedily removed.

When the chains fell from the ankles of the old man he lifted up his eyes and his hands and exclaimed; "Thank God!" The ejaculation was simple, but in its tone revealed the whole long, the despair of months. When they were to go out and be free, they could not believe it at first, but when assured again and again that it was so, a simultaneous burst of gladness went up, which must have made the angels rejoice and "God bless you God Almighty bless you! The Lord will love you, massa!" were the blessings freely showered upon the Colonel, who, scarcely less happy than they, tried to make them understand that they owed their release to the government. They listened and assented, but still evidently looked upon the colonel as their deliverer after all. The scene, he says, he shall never forget. Their joy found vent, with the men, in prayers and ejaculations of praise, with the women in tears and embraces of each other.

Finally the colonel told them they must get ready to go out. Then they fairly flew to their cells for their bags and bundles. And—the colonel told it with a smile—even in this supreme moment womanly vanity (shall we so call a laudable self respect?) showed itself. He could see them smoothing their hair, putting on little articles of finery, and otherwise "prettying up" before their bits of looking glass. It was not many minutes, however, before they all came down, and were marched out, men, women and children, into the free—to them doubly free—air.

They were taken to the recruiting office in Camden street, and here another most affecting scene took place. The news of the opening of the prison had spread like wildfire, and the office and pavement in front were crowded with colored people, many of whom now met friends and relatives for the first time for three years. Well, I must not make my letter too long. Suffice it that joy reigned supreme, and when the colonel asked, "Now, what is to be done with these people for to-night?" the most generous hospitality was liberally tendered. After seeing them thus all provided for, and enlisting sixteen able-bodied men in the service, the colonel returned to camp, feeling that the blessing of Heaven would be upon the work he had that day done.

In the evening one of the Lieutenants, talking with the new freedmen, asked them if they knew the person who liberated them. "No," answered one, "we don't know him, but we know that God sent him." "Yes," echoed the rest; "God sent him—God sent him!"

Thus, you see, "the hand-breadth cloud the sages feared" is spreading. The Colonel hopes soon to open every slave pen in Baltimore, and through God's grace and the strong arm of the government, they shall never be used as such again.

THE SURRENDER OF VICKSBURG.—The rebels are disposed to be indignant that Pemberton chose the Fourth of July, of all days in the calendar, to surrender Vicksburg to our forces. The Richmond Examiner says:

"The particular day chosen for the surrender was at least ungracious. Better that it should have been on the 3d or 5th of July. Why should the calamity have been aggravated to the South by such a selection of the day on which it should take place?"

FROM WASHINGTON.

Mail Dispatches to the Pittsburgh Gazette.

WASHINGTON, Aug. .

FROM THE FRONT.

The latest news from the army brings the dates to this morning, at which time 12th and some other corps, were moving on Warrenton southward. It is supposed the march would be to Culpepper, and that the enemy remained there an engagement was possible.

A CAVALRY BUREAU.

A Cavalry Bureau is about to be attached to the War Department. To it will be assigned the organization and equipment of the cavalry forces of the army; purchases of horses; and the establishment of depots for the reception and discipline of cavalrymen, and the training of horses. A principal reason for the establishment of this Bureau is to economize the enormous expenses attending this arm of the service, and to correct the great abuse of the horses.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

By order of the War Department, the non-commissioned officers of a company cannot be appointed, until the muster of a company is completed, nor can they be mustered in, until the companies have full quotas of enlisted men.

RESIGNATION OF DISBURSING OFFICERS.

Commanding Generals, hereafter, will not approve of tenders of resignation, by disbursing officers, until they have turned over to proper parties, all assets in their hands. The fact of such action will be endorsed on the resignation, and forwarded to the War Department. Resignation of volunteer officers will only be accepted upon exhibiting satisfactory evidence, from the head of the Ordnance Bureau, and proper accounting officers of the Treasury, that they do not owe the United States on account of ordnance.

The Substitute Business in Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Press, of Saturday, says:

The city population is augmented daily by large arrivals of stalwart men from New York and other places, who announce their readiness to enter the United States service "for a consideration." They are in the market, and offer themselves for sale to the highest bidder, after the manner of the auctioneers. As a financial question, the drafted men of this city look with favor on the exemption of the New York conscripts by municipal action. Such a course keeps down the price of substitutes, for it throws upon this community a vast number of men, who have been kept back from entering the army by those who might desire we had no army at all, and enables thereby the people of this city not only to be exempt, but exempt at a low price. The "poor men" of New York will now enter the service, not credited to New York but to Philadelphia. Thanks to the short-sighted wisdom of New York councilmen.

The price of substitutes range from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars. We have heard instances of the payment of as high a sum as two hundred and fifty. The latter is certainly an exorbitant figure in view of the fact that there are so many men offering themselves. Those who pay such high amounts will learn the mistake of selling too hastily. It is estimated that of those drawn from the wheel about one-fourth will enter the service. The remainder will be exempted by disability or by the procurement of substitutes.

Several hundred drafted men and substitutes started for Alexandria yesterday morning, where they will go into a temporary camp of instruction.

THE FITTING OUT OF REBEL PRIVATEERS.—The Washington correspondent of the Springfield Republican says that "Mr. Seward is deeply engaged in a controversy with Lord John Russell, respecting the fitting out of rebel privateers in English ports. There is a possibility of trouble on this question, for Mr. Seward has at length taken a bold stand—the very stand that Mr. Wallas urged upon the President last winter."

IMPORTANT DECISION OF JUDGE BETTS.—Judge Betts has condemned the prizes Peterhoff, Gertrude, Springbok and Stephen Hart for constructive violation of the blockade. The value of the condemned steamers and their cargoes is estimated at about two million of dollars.
