Brave Words from Old England.

The London Star, of the 20th of July, thus speaks of our successes at Vicksburg and Gettysburg:

"With deep, devout, and grateful joy we publish to-day the news of victories that are the heralds of a happy peace. Seldom, if ever, has it been the lot of the journalists to announce on the same sheet two events of such transcendant importance as the fall of Vicksburg and the retreat of Lee. The glorious 4th of July has indeed received a glorious celebration.

"In tens of thousands of Northern homes the birthday of American freedom was being kept with mingled hope and fear—with blended memories of joy and sadness, of pride and humiliation. Throughout New England and the populous Middle States, and the vast northwest—in cities that date back from our own heroic seventeenth century, and in cities that have sprung up within the memory of living men upon the site of world-old forests or on virgin prairies—among the Pilgrim's Rock and on the gold-sown strand of the Pacific—citizens of the great Republic spake with tremulous lips, as beneath the shade of laurels twined with cypress, of their fathers' deeds of freedom, and of the deadly struggle for which their own brothers and sons were wrestling for the preservation of that glorious heritage—the Union, sacred alike to liberty and law.

"They knew not that on that very day the God of their country, and of their race—the God of justice and of mercy—had vouchsafed to the common wealth a great deliverance. Their broken railways and telegraph lines delayed the happy tidings; but on that same Fourth of July the flag of the Union had been exalted over the very Christian stronghold of rebellious slavemasters, and the sun had risen upon the greatest of their hosts in dire retreat.

"Whatever remains to be done or suffered—whatever battles to be fought or fortresses to besiege—the armies and the people of the Union may at least rejoice, with unutterable gladness and thanksgiving, that the boastful progress of the enemy has been turned back and the very chiefest of his defences broken down."

Colonization.

In noticing a long article which recently appeared in the Baltimore American, advocating the foreign colonization of the negroes of this country, the N. Y. Tribune says:—We should like right well to see a liberal portion of our National area—say Florida, or a third of Texas—set apart for Black settlement, and our Colored People incited to migrate thither and there develop and test their industrial and political capacity. We like also the idea of Colonization in Africa by Black Christians from this country, who go out to carry the blessings of civilization and true religion to the benighted lands of their ancestors. So far, we heartily indorse the idea of Colonization.

But that the whole past and present Laboring Class of ten or twelve States of our Union—Four Millions in number—should ever be exiled from the land of their birth, seems to us a wild and vicious dream. In the first place, we need Labor, and should for the next century invite rather than repel it. Secondly, the owners of the Southern soil can never find or mould another Laboring Class who will suit them so well or serve them so effectively as that to which they are accustomed. The Poor Whites of the South will not work as hirelings; they must be gradually elevated and educated into small freeholders and farmers. The cotton, rice and sugar of the South must continue to be grown, as heretofore, on large plantations, since their economical production and preparation require a concentration of machinery and implements beyond the means of small farmers. The blacks are accustomed to plantation labor; they will do it better and cheaper, when freed and fairly hired, than any other class will or can do it; and the congenial life and labor of the plantation, with its social opportunities and cheap gayeties, suit them better than the isolation and solitary toil of the petty farmer. Banish slavery from the south to-morrow, and the great mass of the plantation negroes would neither wish to leave their present homes nor would their masters consent to lose them. All the change needed is the substitution of freedom for slavery, leaving all beside to go on much as hitherto. The position of the blacks would still be totally distinct from that of the Poor Whites, who never were nor will be plantation laborers. As to amalgamation, it would no more take place than it now does in this city, where there is less of it among one million people than in a slave county or parish with twenty thousand inhabitants.

Kentucky Election.

Of the Union triumph in Kentucky the Cincinnati Gazette says:

Through the ballot-box the Union men of Kentucky have spoken, and by the decisive majority of twenty to twenty-five thousand, the estimate at Frankfort last night, they have elected their ticket. This is a gratifying result, creditable to the men of Kentucky who stand by the Government, and cheering to the loyal people of the nation. It is all the more gratifying because a different result was apprehended; and because the success of the so-called Democratic ticket would have led to civil war, in which rivers of blood would have been shed, and the State devastated by fire and sword.

By the patriotic action of the loyal people the State Government is to be controlled by men about whose loyalty there is no question; men who are terribly in earnest, in their determination to crush this wicked and causeless rebellion, and from whom no uncertain sound is to be apprehended. The majority for Governor warrants the conviction that a majority of loyal men are elected to the Legislature; and that in all departments of the State Government the not-a-man and not-a-dollar party, otherwise called Vallandigham Democrats, otherwise styled Copperheads, are in a minority that will render them harmless. They may hiss and snap at loyal men, as they have done heretofore, but beyond this they are powerless.

Amusing Circumstance.

During the draft in the Fourteenth ward a little incident gave rise to much merriment, and contributed to the good feeling everywhere manifested about the conscription. In the crowd stood a pale-faced Irishman, with his hands crossed and arms behind his back. He gazed intently as each name was drawn from the wheel of destiny. He had not been heard to speak a word to anybody. Presently he appeared to be operated upon by some unseen galvanic battery. During his spasm he exclaimed in an Hibernian tone:

"What is it round I wheri is round—round it is?" shouted the man. He was evidently full of dread suspense.

"What's the matter with you?" shouted the Provost Marshal.

"Oh, be Jabers, here is round a dozen of times, for that man jist drawed last is my next door neighbor."

At this point the universal laugh came in.—Philadelphia North American.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Mail Dispatches to the Pittsburgh Gazette.

WASHINGTON Aug. 4, 1863

ARMY MOVEMENTS.

On Sunday last the entire army was in motion. Prior to that time it had been concentrated above Warrenton and Warrenton Junction. Most of the corps commenced moving on Saturday towards Culpepper. It is not supposed that anything beyond skirmishing can result from this movement, until pushed to the Rapidan, along the South side of which Lee may establish his line of defense. The weather is so excessively warm, that military movements cannot be prosecuted with much rapidity.

MISCEGENATION.

Slave-hunting in the District continues to be prosecuted briskly, and several decisions of the Supreme Court of the District seem to have given it new impetus. To-day, the papers give an account of the arrest of a man attempting to smuggle off a free negro among a party of fugitives who had been arrested under a warrant from the United States Commissioner. A day or two ago a negro woman was found hand-cuffed and concealed in a room on "the avenue," under the watch of certain parties, who proposed to run her off to Virginia. They had a warrant for the arrest of a fugitive from the U. S. Commissioner, but the negro woman whom they had in confinement proved not to be the one named in the warrant at all. Cases similar to these are being made public every day or two, while it is altogether probable that by far the greater number escape undetected.

France and the Confederacy.

Mr. Conway writes from Venice to the Boston Commonwealth:

There is some reason to believe what I have been told by a very able man, formerly in the employ of Metternich, that General Forey has been instructed, as soon as he can intrench himself in the City of Mexico, to recognise the Government of Jefferson Davis, and to form some kind of alliance with it. A paragraph to this effect flitted through the telegraphic dispatches on the Continent, but I did not pay much attention to it; but I have some reason now, to think that there is some truth in it.

If Napoleon gets seriously bound up in American affairs, the more Eastern despotisms will begin their encroachments again. Those England will resist, being pledged to preserve the destruction of the governmental balance. So England will interfere with us over there, only by so defending herself and France over here, that France may lend its power to the Confederacy. But what Italy and Poland will do, under these circumstances, Mazzini and Garibaldi have not yet announced. So far as human judgment can go, it would signal a world-wide revolution.

A Serious Blow.

The great confiscation at Havana is practically a gain for us of no consequence, so less than $1,500,000 worth of cotton and other goods, belonging to blockade runners of British race, having been destroyed. This will add materially to the bankruptcy which has already befallen so many English merchants engaged in the contraband trade. Taken in connection with the constant captures made by our blockading squadrons of large and valuable cargoes and vessels, this blow will fall heavily on the rebel sympathizers in England. A cavalry raid into rebeldom itself could have done no more to help our cause than this great fire is likely to accomplish. The wires bring which tell abroad in the parts where rebel supplies came from, and it is far better to bankrupt the British blockade runners and speculators than to waste time in Southern raids. The English are the only people engaged in the contraband trade.

SETTLEMENT UNDER THE HOMESTEAD LAW.—As a matter of general information, it should be known that persons having selected and entered upon lands under the Homestead law, and who subsequent to the expiration of five years' actual and continual settlement, can, at any time before the expiration of that period, obtain a patent deed as a certificate title, by paying the price of the land at the minimum price per acre, and making proof of settlement and cultivation as provided by existing laws granting preemption.

Returns just received at the General Land Office, from St. Peters, Minnesota, and the more distant regions of Vancouver, Washington Territory, show that actual settlements are now in progress under the Homestead law.

GRANT is a working man. Years ago he married in St. Louis, resigned his situation in the army, turned farmer, and drove his team into St. Louis with wood. In his recent march, in May, he was three days on foot, with his rations and baggage, leading his mon, not being willing to delay until his horses should come up.

It is stated that a large force has gone from the Yorktown Peninsula to assist Gen. Gilmore in the siege of Charleston.
