

Judicial Nullification.

We return to the subject of the attempted Pennsylvania Democratic division in favor of the rebellion.

There is another objection equally formidable with that which we have just examined, although, like it, entirely unobjectionable in the dissenting opinion of Judge Strong, and it is this:

The prayer of the bill is not to stay, or to prevent a nuisance or other invasion of property, but to intercept the commission of a crime, in a seizure and abduction of the person.

It is not to be said, in answer to this inquiry, that it was a question upon the constitutionality of an Act of Congress, upon which the Court was divided.
