Taylor given the above sentiments his approva We answer, he has. The letter of the Signal ed: tor was answered by General Taylor on the 15th of May, 1547. It commences by acknowledging the 'receipt of your letter, with the enclosure your editorial, extracted from the Signal of the 130 of April-and then proceeds to say, that his dutie will not permit him to answer the letter in th terms demanded by its courtesy-that he did no seek the Presidency, and hoped when the war wa over to find in the society of his family and parts ular friends, and in occupations more congenial i his wishes, a more tranquil and satisfactory life than high honor and responsibility could confer-Then comes in the following important paragraph

"With these remarks. I trust you will pardon me for thus briefly replying to you, which I do with HIGH OPNION and APPROVAL of the SEN TIMENTS and VIEWS embraced in your editor

Now, we ask, is there not here "some assurance of perfect impartiality" on the subject in question Does not Gen. Taylor here approve of leaving the settlement of the question to the Representative of the People' What assurance more does the Tribune wish? Ought not the "assurance' here given, coupled with the assurance in the Allison let-ter, satisfy every good Whig and free soil Democrat of the eminent consistency and propriety of sus taining and supporting Gen. The New York Tribune, of Tuesday, says-'Need we say again that we mean to act and vote with the Whig Party in this election, as we have ever before done, and that we are only natious that it should stand upon ground which will ean-ble us to do so ellectually? The Tribune can do something, (however small his need of it, to swell the vote for General Taylor, it it shall appear that in so doing it is not contributing to the Fixtension of Slavery: it can do nothing, and lift is helt could do nothing, it the contrary should be manifest.'
