THE IRISH NEWS.

The Trioune's version of the Irish news meets with universal and emphatic condemnation from persons of all shades of opinion. It is in truth one of the boldest, as well as one of the clumsiest attempts to impose upon the public of which we have any recollection; and it will very much shake the reputation for integrity which the Tribune has generally enjoyed. The news on its face bore palpable signs of falsehood. Not that it was impossible; or even unlikely, that a great battle had been fought, and the British worsted. Success in the first onest were prepared to expect, whatever might be our forebodings as to the ultimate result of the struggle. But that this particular statement was untrue, a repulsed and killed, could not have exceeded 2,000 repulsed and killed an stench perceptible at several miles distant, must have been there on the first, and yet the Freeman's Journal of August 5th, a paper decidedly in the vernment makes no mention of this grent battle, respondence' asserts that the passengers on the when before was Mr. Greeley so gulled by so shalnce, when ample time must be collected under the excitement and hope which this news is well calculated to produce; but what becomes of the Tribune's authority and usefulness for the fature? Is there not some danger of pal-pably false news being hereafter known as 'Tri-bune News.' We hope most sincerely that brother Greeley may be able to give a satisfactory expla nation of these things, but we must confess that at present our faith in his judgment at least is much shaken.

the trouble to read the little extract below! It contains a great deal of good sense, and upon a subject of some practical importance in this region.—
There is a universal complaint that good help cannot be procured for love or money. Into whatever house you may happen to go, it is the theme of discourse. It is made the excuse for dirty kitchens—bad cooking, dusty furniture, and almost every other evil and difficulty under the sun. Now, we have no doubt there is great difficulty in prohouse you may happen to go, it is the theme of discourse. Speechmaking is becoming pretty much of a bore, in these latter days. Every addle pate, who can tear a paraion to tatter, and utter high sounding words, with a blustering bellowing voice, while his arms saw the sir, and his hands thump the table, so maiders himself an orator, a genius, heaven in spired to enlighten the world, though he be a innocent of education, common sense, or any other qualification for the tank, as a man well can be tit tit time that the Fool Killer should come along; as our friend, the Dector, used to say or we shall have an epidemic of rat and nonsense.
