On Saturday a scene occurred in the Assembly which occasioned unparalleled confusion. A member having commented severely upon Republican haggarts and Government apathy, the members of the Republican party were so exasperated that they rushed simultaneously towards the Tribune, and attempted to scale it, but were prevented by the officers until the President suspended that they rushed simultaneously towards the Tribune, and attempted to scale it, but were prevented by the officers until the President suspended that they rushed simultaneously towards the Tribune, and attempted to scale it, but were prevented by the officers until the President suspended that they rushed simultaneously towards the Tribune, and attempted to scale it, but were prevented by the officers until the President suspended to the season. All the moderate papers, the next day, contained bursts of indignation against the atrocity of the Red Republicans.

Report says that in consequence of the opposition to the President by the Assembly, Government will propose universal suffrage, but defer the election until the people vote on an organized law giving the executive government power to act in the mean time. This is only a rumor, for a cabinet council resolved to support an amendment propose ob by Flacon, to the effect that the National Assembly will delegate executive power to a citizen, who shall receive the fulle of President to Government takes position against the Government takes position against the moderate party, and the known majority of the nation.
