The Post of Thursday has a characteristic article on the "Friends." It says that ninety-nine hundredths voted with the "Federal party"—that Priends abhor Republican equality, which recognizes "the pour laborer to exert as great, power at, the belipt box, as the wealthy capitalist is capable of exerting,"—that your "true Judence of Democracy,"—a true conservative—eschewing all change but the change that makes up the allapowerful dollar.

There, in brief, are the changes of the Post, against the Friends. Whether they will most injure those against whom they are made, or he who makes them, cannot be a subject of much doubt—the position of the Friends. They have failing uithed one. They have failing the process of the Post, as distinguished one. They have failing the reservoir of promise hereafter.
