In entering upon the new year, it may not be ur stable to take a rapid glance at the great events profitable to take a rapid glance at the great events which have occurred in that which is past, and which make it the most remarkable of any since the time of Luther. It is true, that greater polity changes followed in the wake of the first French Revolution. Napoleon had all Europe under his feet, and Europe, in its turn, overthrew him. Ar miss marched hither and there-a curse alike to the country which sent them forth, and to that against which they were sent. Their progress was gen scally, for the time, arrested by one governme making over to another a portion of its people, and it may be, throwing in, as a make weight, a woman with a pedigree, but without other merit, as an of-fering to the victorious chief. But in the midston all the turnell and barbarism, little of ho progres was made. Man, for the most part, were station-stry. All partice aliko-Napoleon not less than the Char-ware intolerant of free speech, and a free prese-the two great achievements of 1848, which, we think, the people cannot again be permanently deprived, and with which, it would perhaps well, if, for the present, they would be content-Let these work a while and the rest will follow easily. But we are ahead of our subject.

I see they are looking round all over the country for men to make up a Cabinet for Gineral Taylor, and they seem to be going upon the rule that them that did the most towards electing him must have the first chance in the Cabinet. Now, going upon that rule, the first chance belongs to you, of course; for there isn't no other man in the country that did a quarter so much towards electing him a you did. In fact, if it hadn't been for you, he never would a'-been elected at all; and if he doesn't give you the first place in his Cabinet, if you'll take it, be'll be the ungreatfulset man that over lived.
