STEARBOAT ADVENTURE—The popular steumer iaon. Boone, formerly of the Cinciunati and Mayaville packet line, accomplished an exploit in navigation a short time since, which gives her title to the honor of a pinneer. She ascended White River, a stream emptying into the Wabash, and gave to the wondering people of Mr. Pleasant, Ind., the first sight of a steasboat. After discharging a quantity of reight at that town, the Boone continued on, and ascended the East Fork of White River to the datance of 30 miles. As she passed, the inhabitants—rushed out upon the banks, and gazed upon the strange sight in wonder, and some were actually alarmed as the monater of mechanism thundered through waters that were nover before disturbed by a steamer. Upon the return ism thundered through waters that were nover before disturbed by a steamer. Upon the return of the boat to Mount Pleasant, the banks were lined with people, many having come in from the country to see the right—the news having spread far and near—and as she lay against the bank, some not so thind as the rest, ventured on bank to some not so thind as the rest, ventured on bank to the seem, many of the people scampered back to town in perfect fright, while the children sent up wild shricks of alarm. This exploit was never before performed by a steamer, and it is believed to have gion, but the Captain assures us that there were many in the country through which the bont passed who had never heard tell of a steamboat, and few had ever seen one.—(Cin. Com.
