facts

General Shields was a lad when he came to this country with his father—and his father having been naturalized, helwas, by the same means, naturalized himself. Some ten years ago, when there was a revolution projected in Canada, Shields then a young and ardent apint, while traveling the circuit with a certain Judge, expressed a detrimination to join the Patrnots. The Juge told him, if he should do no, and was caught by the British, unless he was naturalized, it may prove a hanging business for him, and admised him to be naturalized. He did so, not that he considered it necessary to render him eligible to all the privileges that are extended to citterns of foreign hirth, but because he thought it might be of service to him, if, by the foretunes of war, he should fall into the hands of the British, in his proposed visit to Canada.
