The underalgued Committee—appointed by the citizens of Allegheny to distribute the funds collected for the relief of the aniferers by the blowing up and burning of Fife's Factory—beg leave to state, that the sum of seven hundred dollars was placed at their disposal, which they have distributed among he various families and individuals who suffered by that sad occurrence. Without specifing the sums given to each, the Committee deem it sufficient to say, that having carefully sought out, as far as practicable, those who had sulfered loss, or personal injury, they endeavored by personal sonference or otherwise, to ascertain the character and extent of their loss—the measure of their dependence and wants—their ability to labor. &c and with information thus obtained, they approprist ated to each, such as amount, as the character and circumstances of the respective cases seemed to reated to each, such an amount, as the character and circumstances of the respective cases seemed to require. That they have committed no metakes, or that they have committed no metakes, or that they have given entire satisfaction to all concerned, they dare hardly venture to affirm; but, they have honeatly endeavored to do, what, with their knowledge of the facts, justice appeared to demand. the hurried tramplings of a thousand feet, and the cries of the firemen. The belify was soon on fire to the very top, and in a short time the bell fell with a thundering sound to the earth.

Had the wind been high, a great deal of damags would have been done. The belify burned for a long time before it fell. The fire is burning yet, as we go to press, and the roof, though it has not yet fallen, cannot, we think, be saved. Even if it is the Church will be so much damaged, that it must be rebuilt.

The fire originated, it is believed, from a stove pape, which was conducted out on the roof, near one of the buttresses of the belify.
