On Wednesday night, the wind' commenced biowing from the north west, and before midnight it had increased to a gale. The waves bent with great fary upon the steamer's larboard quartet, and at half past four, she was discovered to have sprung a leak. The putypa were set to work, but the wa- ter gradually gained, until the larboard far was put ont, and the foremen stoyd to their knees in water. At this time, when 25 miles dutant from land, it was dot umined to abandon the vessel, and es- deaver to zeare the Maniton Islanda, and she was bended for the beach as the only alternative to prevent her from sinking. But notwitakadding the ut most exertions of the passongers and drew, togetizer with the blige pumps, which discharged 1500 gallons per minute, the water continued to gain, until one after another of her fares was each of the first being submerged, the capite was ab- inguished, and the engine was able to make onfy about air revolutions-barrely enough to past the centre; she, however, was fast nearing the inad, and when a quarter of a mile distant, all but two of the first being submerged, the capite was stop ped on its or unive. The jib was still raised, and about twenty minutes past 12 o'clock, she suit du the Michight allore, about three miles below the Stepring Bear, nearly filled with water.
