BESPOTISH. BY J. E. H. There was a time when tyrants arm'd Coald bind their clashing chains on man, And drive their charbit acceds unburnt Moso Mercy's tears were no arail, An bonest trast no spreading thirld, To save the weak from denione pale To whom revenge appeal'd.

In castle halls the banquet guest Was stricken dumb at batred's frown, Was stricken dumb at baired's frown, And Knavory at a first request Struck youth and beauty down. To whom could then the wround append Tog guard them from the wrath of heat 9 The Friest was not a man to feel-The Charch was with the State 1

Yes, Justice was a mocking sound Taknown around the altar stone, L's bones on dreary deserts found Where once it wept slope ! It clung not in Cathedral halls, With bermit monks it did not stay, With hermit monks it did nut an Nor way'd its banner on the walls Of Convents old and grey.

It sat not on the field of Mars Where hecaiombs of heroes slopt, Nor with the dreamer witched the stars, Nor through the twilight crept 1 O dreary years until the tramp Of rightcoust thought a woke mankind, And gathei'd by the midnight lamp The treasures of the midd!

Wher'er its clarion notes are blown "Wher'er its clarion noise uto down There heary error once it's cree; And round the orcs'er and the throne Is potent echoes rise? "This is no and decoinful sound "That breaks upon the patriot's ear-Prom out the wide and dark profound From out the wide and dark Bome angel abail appear ! Pressurant, 1549.
