" WHERE DOES THE BALTIMORE ROAD STRIKE

THE OHIO? "-The Chronicle and Atlas, in an article about the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, has the following:

"Where does the Baltimore Road strike the Ohiol". At Fish Creek, by charter and by nature. By the mouth of Fish Creek must every car pass that goes on the Baltimore road, whether it comes from Cheinauti, from Columbus, from Newark, or any other point. That spot, then, is a fixed point, in regard to Ohio. A cir does not start from Wheeling, on the Ohio, but it starts at Fish Creek on the Onio."

The Wheeling Gazette, in noticing the article save:

says:

"Ho is slightly mistaken in his premises, and more in his conclusions. The Railroad does not strike the Ohio river at Fish Creek, either by its charter or by nature. The charter requires the road to terminate at the city of Wheeling, and nature was kind enough to require the same thing."

We are informed by a gentleman lately from Clarksburg. Virginia, that the people of that region are confacent that the Baltimore road will never go to Wheeling. They say that the road has been put under contract to the very point where the roates to Fish Creek and Parkersburg diverge, within three miles of the great north weather Tumpike, an excellent road to Parkersburg. They say, forther that it is the design of the Company to wait at this point until they try the Virginia Legislature once more for the right of way to Parkersburg, and that they have confident hopes of success. This is the opinion of intelligent men of Western Virginia, founded on what grounds we cannot say. There can be no question that it is the interest of the Company to go to Parkersburg in preference to Wheeling. Where are the Prophets and the Bards of old,
The pure and just?
The hollow of an infant's hand might hold
Isaiah's dust!

But in the shadow of the ages dead Some spirit stays,
It starts before the pilgrims as they tread
Its dreary way.

It whispers sadly in the twilight shade
"Decay, decay."
It cries within the temples kings have made—
"O where are they?"

And pointing to the solemn ruins round, On plain or hill. On plain or hill,
It sayeth, in the silence of the ground,
"The dead are still." But in the Present do we feel the good
The true have wrought—
That of the bard who wrote in solitude,
The strong of thought?

The Prophets whose immortal spirits shone From light above—
The brave who labored for the Right alone With trust and love!

Then in the Present do ye feel that ye Can act no part?
That around the pathway of your destiny
No sound hall start? Lending an influence to the many here

Through mazes led,
When ye have wander'd from your living sphere
And joined the dead?
