THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

PITTSBURGH

MONDAY MORNING, JAN. 14, 1850.

For the Pittsburgh Gazette.

Fraternal Conference—Old and New School Re-Union.

In the Gazette of last Saturday an article is found, endorsed by the Rev. Dr. Riddle, and Rev. S. M. Sparke, together with three other gentlemen connected with Dr. Riddle's church, with the caption, "The Presbyterian Church Union Question."

This article demands some reply, which we will endeavor to make in the spirit of Christian brethren. In matters of Christian controversy, truth must guide, as far as it is known, for by adopting this course it will appear that verity and not envy and a desire for maintaining what is proper, rather than a contradicting spirit, moves us to oppose any person, measure, or thing. Concessions to an opponent, so far as truth will justify, prove magnanimity of soul. This was the plan pursued by the Great Apostle in his controversy with the Jews. He conceded every thing that was true, in the arguments they advanced, and then set to work and overthrew all of them by a simple statement of facts. Heb. 9, 1-10, and ver. 11-29. We desire to follow this blessed example.

In reference to the article of our brethren, we ask.

1. What gave rise to the "fraternal conferences?" Ans. A few days previous to the first meeting, Dr. Campbell, Dr. Riddle, Mr. Sparks, and Mr. West, happened to meet in Dr. Riddle's Study. Dr. Campbell introduced the subject of re-union. Dr. Campbell and Dr. Riddle conducted the conversation, for a short time. Afterwards, Mr. West united in it. Mr. Sparks, it is believed, withdrew before the conversation ended. A meeting was agreed on for the Monday following, i.e., Monday, 3d December. Dr. Campbell agreed to have the place prepared, and to have his brethren properly informed on the subject. There was then one Old School and three New School brethren present, when this conversation commenced and it commenced with Dr. Campbell. "Honor to whom honor is due."

II. When the conference held its first meeting what did it contemplate accomplishing? Ans.—The great point urged was union in Pittsburgh and vicinity. The rapidly increasing population of the two cities was stated—the solemn responsibility to this population, amongst whom God had appointed the location of the present resident ministers, and the necessity of union to produce a stronger and more effectual influence upon the people, for their spiritual good, as well as the necessity to have the division existing healed, was urged with earnestness. The Old School brethren had no further aim, at first, than re-union in Pittsburgh, between the two Presbyteries of the Old and New School. In the progress of the conference, this object was extended to the Presbyteries of Erie and Meadville, owing to synodical relations existing in the New School body, between these two Presbyteries, and the Presbytery of Pittsburgh. An extension of the correspondence to the entire body of the church, in both branches, was pled for by some of the New School brethren, and a motion made to that end, but the opposition it met with, for several reasons, caused the mover to withdraw it. So "the first and third plans were dispensed with, and the second adopted.

III. What were the reasons why the motion for a general union was withdrawn? We give first their own statement, and then our answer. Their statement is—"In order, however, to shew the entire sincerity of our wish for a general union, one of the undersigned (Mr. Edwards) moved, and another (Mr. Wallace) seconded a motion to the following effect: That the entire facts in regard to this conference, together with the substance of the views expressed on both sides, be incorporated in a circular letter to be addressed to the entire Presbyterian Church of the two schools, with a view to elicit the opinions and feelings of both, so that if the movement met with favor it might be incipient to a general union of all sound Presbyterians in both branches of the Church."

Our answer to their statement of the foregoing motion being withdrawn is, that it was withdrawn,

1. Because it was shown by three New School speakers, that sound New School Presbyterians would not agree to a general Union themselves, unless an expurgation first took place on their own side of the house; that is, some Presbyterians of the New School would not offer a re-union of their own body, as that body now is, with the Old School body.

2. Because such expurgation was shown to be impracticable, and that things must remain as they are, or another exciding act must take place on the part of the New School, to rid themselves of the elements of destruction, or the sound among them must secede from the unsound. And

3. Because the motion included in it, the object of having Old School minorities, to unite with New School majorities, under their name; the same as the New School minority in Pittsburgh and vicinity would have to assume the name of the majority in case of re-union. This was seen to be an effort merely to change the character of parties, without effecting a general and solid reunions; or in the least purifying the distant parts of the New School Church. The motion was therefore strongly opposed, and consequently withdrawn, but not for the reason assigned by Dr. Riddle, and his friends, as we believe. An attempt at re-union, on such a basis was also seen to be an attempt to change the state of the real question before conference, which question was then, Union in Western Pennsylvania. This attempt to change the question was fully met by Mr. Dickey, the chairman and others of the conference.

IV. Dr. Riddle and his brethren say, they take their "present position from conscientious motives."

What are these motives? We had hoped that Dr. Riddle, especially, who had expressed himself so frequent, so earnest, and so anxious for reunion, would have had no conscientious scruples in co-operating with his brethern, in a practicable way, to effect an object so desirable and so "near to his heart." The conference closed, leaving two things for future action. First a committee having been appointed, the business of future correspondence was committed to that body. Dr. Riddle was one of this committee, the paper prepared for the Presbyteries he helped to correct and voted in committee to the amendments suggested. He pronounced the statement, after hearing it twice read, "as a faithful historic narrative of the principle matters which transpired in conference." Second, the conference instituted a weekly prayer meeting, for the future attendance and co-operation of Ministers and Elders of both parties. To this, the Doctor and his brethern agreed, and in the Doctor's words, we say, "they would be confessedly in a wrong position, who should refuse christian conference and prayer with their brethern." Again the Doctor's article says, "We were influenced by considerations like these, that Christian conference and prayer might do good," &c. If this be a true position, why then do not the Doctor and his Elders attend at these meetings? But what good can come from praying, if we believe the thing about which we pray cannot be accomplished? Nay more, if we not only "expect no success," but determine in our hearts to prevent, if we can, the thing to promote which we profess to meet in Christian conference and prayer, is not this to mock God? We are told to "ask in faith nothing wavering, for he that wavereth is as the wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. Let not that man think that he shall receive anything from the Lord." James, 1, 6, 7.

V. The publication in the Gazette, of the paper adopted by both committees and conference, is much objected to, by the Doctor and his friends. The solution of this is at hand. The paper itself contains two reasons which ought to be deemed sufficient to justify its publication. But we have strong additional grounds for its appearance in print. Dr. Riddle stated, when he met with the committee on the 14th Dec., that his church was certainly some sort of a news of the object and doings in conference had reached his people. It was necessary therefore that the paper should be published, to prevent misrepresentations, as well as to give the people the knowledge of the true state of affairs. And the only regret on our part is, that the paper was not addressed to the members, as well as the Elders and Ministers of the churches.

Why wish concealment, or express even a desire to "keep the matter quiet," from the christian public, and the people of our churches, a matter which so eminently interests them; and especially so, when a ferment had begun before the paper was published. Was not this ferment the result of a distorted view of the facts of the case?

The paper,
