[The following lines occurred to me as 1 ato efore a portrait of the great American statesma The painting is the work of J. R. Lambdon, Esq finished artist, and a worthy gentleman. j

Art! what a work thy pencil wrought! Here are the features of a mage, Whose guant mind and tow'ring thought Electrify an age!

Within those dark, deep, meaning eyes, Methinks eternal genins lives; While alumbering neath that forchead lies The depth of thought at gives !

Gives to a stern, yet noble race ! Whose Roman sculs shall disayow, That thou hast earned the black disgrace Some dastard echoes now !

Rail on in vain, vindictive knave! Panting for glory through abuse. Thy tonggue would foul thy Faiher's grave. Thy Mother's fame traduce.

List! there are daring hearts that praise ! A phalanx of defenders yet; Thy name, oh! mighty sage, will blaze Till Freedom's sun will set!

Live! in a Nation's proud estsem, That potent arbiter, and just, Whon the wild knaves that track thee, seem So many grains of dust!

Though this great face on which I look, Is but a breathless gem of Art, It moves me like a silent book Where beats a living heart! J. K. N.
