SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 2, 1850.

SNOW.—Snow fell at Warren, Pa. on Saturday night last, to the depth of four or five inches, in consequence of which, says the Ledger, together with the recent rains, the river had swollen to a good rafting stage. This will materially relieve the lumbermen upon the river, but the Tionesta, Kinzua and Conewango creeks are said to be too low yet to run, consequently much the largest portion of the lumber now manufactured will be left behind, leaving the amount to be run to market comparatively very small.

ROBBERY IN BUTLER.—On Wednesday night, the 23d inst., the store of Mr. Thomas Stehley, of Butler, was entered and robbed of a large amount of jewelry, watches, dry goods, &c., valued at about $1000. The villians effected their entrance by taking out a small window above the door. No trace of the robbers has, as yet, been discovered, although every effort has been made for their detection and arrest.

THE UNION MEETING AT NEW YORK.—The Union Peace Meeting held at New York on Wednesday last, is said by the New York papers to have been one of the greatest political demonstrations ever witnessed in that city. The call was signed by over 2,000 names, embracing a large number of the most respectable and influential citizens, who are desirous of sustaining the recent legislation of Congress on the subject of Slavery, and allaying all public agitation and excitement in regard to it.

This is the first demonstration of the kind in the North, and we have no doubt it will be followed by others. Journals from all quarters, and of every political bias, teem with evidences of roused patriotic feeling in all sections of the country, on this important subject. In the extreme South, meetings are almost daily held, and in many instances, while they deprecate the Slavery Law itself, they seem firmly resolved to rally to the support of the Union, and to denounce and frown down the disorganizing attempts of factionists and agitators in both sections, and give peace and quiet to the country.

Industrial Exhibition.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee on the London Industrial Exhibition, held at the residence of Col. Peter Force—

Present—Colonel Peter Force, chairman; Joseph Henry, L. L. D.; Captain Charles Wilkes, U. S. N.; Professor Walter R. Johnston; Joseph C. G. Kennedy—members; and, on invitation, Commodores Warrington and Skinner of the U. S. Navy.

After a full and free expression of opinion with reference to the letter of the Secretary of the Navy to the President of the United States—a copy of which had been communicated to the committee, and in which the President acquiesces in the tender of the use of an American ship to convey American products to London—and with reference to the suggestion of the Secretary of the Navy that the Executive Committee should indicate as early as possible the kind of vessel deemed necessary for the purpose—it was, on motion.

Resolved, That the thanks of the committee be tendered to the President of the United States and Secretary of the Navy for the prompt and satisfactory manner with which they have responded to the request of the committee for the use of a ship of the national marine to transport the products of American industry to London.

Resolved, That the Executive Committee beg leave to designate the store ship Fredonia as one suitable for the purpose and acceptable to the committee.

Resolved, That in view of the advantages anticipated therefrom to our citizens, and inasmuch as it is desirable that the greatest possible facilities be granted to Americans desiring to visit the exhibition, that the proprietors of the several steam vessel and packet lines be recommended to reduce the price of passage to and from England to those desiring to attend the exhibition.

PETER FORCE,
Chairman Executive Committee.

LATEST FROM LIBERIA.—The following accounts from the Republic of Liberia, are from letters from President Roberts, dated respectively, Monrovia, July 10th, and 19th:

"The question of colonization as the best means of suppressing, or rather abolishing the slave trade, has already been mooted in England. I have received several communications from persons there asking my opinion in regard to the efficiency of the British blockading squadron on this coast, and what would be the probable result, if the squadron were withdrawn, and in its stead, Government or British merchants were to establish factories, for legitimate trade, and model farms at points where the slave trade is carried on.

"I have invariably answered to the effect that the withdrawal of the squadron, thereby throwing open the traffic, would be most disastrous to the future welfare of Africa; and that so long as a market remains, and persons will resort to the coast for slaves, the natives will sell each other, and that trading factories, model farms, or moral suasion will have but little influence in restraining the natives from slave trading; that, in my opinion, the surest plan is colonization. Secure the political jurisdiction of the country, send out a colony, organize a government, and the slave trade must cease."

"Since I last wrote, our public affairs, as usual, have been advancing quietly, and in order.

"The slavers are very loath to give up their trade at Gallinas and New Cestors. A few weeks ago a Spanish felucca, after slaves, appeared off the former place, and was boarded by one of her Majesty's cruisers; but as she had no slave cargo, nor any slave equipments to be found on board, she was not detained. The captain of the felucca, however, actually communicated to the chiefs on shore, his intention to take slaves if they were to be obtained; but they, having so recently ceded to us the jurisdiction of the territory, at once declined to enter into any arrangements with him. He then proceeded to New Cesters and Tradetown, at which latter place he offered cash in doubloons for one hundred slaves, on delivery at the beach. So here, I regret to say, found some encouragement, at least in promises, from two or three of the head men.

"In the mean time, however, we received intelligence of his real character, and despatched our little vessel, the Lark, to seize him, if found upon our coast. By this time her Majesty's brig Hound was also in search of him. The fellow got wind of these movements, and abandoned his purpose I understand he has gone to try the south coast. I feel quite sure that the slave trade cannot again be revived within the territorial limits of Liberia, that is, between Sierra Leone and Cape Palmas. Without barracoons on shore, in which to collect slaves, they cannot possibly carry on the traffic, and none certainly can be established on the territory over which our laws extend.

"Mr Shaw who has the management of an expedition, fitted up by several eminent mercantile and manufacturing firms in England, for the purpose of testing, by practical experiments, the possibility of obtaining a supply of cotton from the west coast of Africa, is here, and has commenced operations under encouraging prospects. There is but little doubt that cotton, of good quality, can be produced in Liberia."

SMOKE CONSUMERS.—It is gratifying to know that human ingenuity has at last devised a protection for railroad travellers against the smoke and coal cinders which render that mode of conveyance usually not only uncomfortable, but dangerous. Multitudes of persons have had their eyes seriously injured by the cinders which are drawn into the cars by the eddying currents of air produced by the rapid motion of the railway trains; and a general discomfort is often experienced, particularly in warm weather, from the necessity of closing the windows to avoid the annoyance. A patent smoke consuming apparatus has been invented, and, upon trial, has proved to be perfectly effectual. It consists of what may be called an endless chain of bars; and this chain of bars forms the bottom of the furnace on which the live coal blazes. The chain moves very slowly forward—not more than an inch in the minute—from the front to the back of the furnace, carrying the fire along with it. At the back of the furnace, carrying the fire along with it. At the back or bridge of the furnace, the chain of bars moves round, and comes back beneath Thus it goes on endlessly from morning to night.

The apparatus is fixed on a carriage, which is run into its place on a species of rail road; and the whole—that is the whole bottom of the furnace—can be dragged in or out at pleasure, by which means every facility is presented for cleaning, renovating, &c. The chain of bars is moved by connecting gear from the steam engine. The coal is laid on a hopper at the mouth of the furnace, and is carried forward by the bars, the depth of coal that enters being regulated by an iron door, which is depressed or raised like a sluice. The principle of smoke consumption consists in the slow and regular admission of the coal. Instead of being heaved in with a shovel, so as to produce continual gusts of smoke, it is admitted, as it were, by hair breadths.

The ignition is therefore little at a time; and what smoke is raised, having to go over the whole bright fire beyond, it is necessarily consumed. Nothing gets up the chimney that is perceptible to the eye. The apparatus, we are told, has the further advantage of economising fuel and attendance, while it sustains the steam equally with the common practice of firing. The whole invention is as simple as it is ingenious. More than a year ago, one of these patents was applied by the Messrs. Chambers of Edinburgh, to a ten horse power engine, which they employed to drive their extensive printing machinery. They have found it every thing they desired. No smoke, they say, is ever seen to issue from their chimnies, and on a calculation as rigid as could be made, the saving seems to be about one twentieth of the fuel, or one ton to every twenty consumed without the patent. They have concluded that if a ten horse power engine is any criterion, smoke is no longer an unavoidable nuisance in connection with locomotives and manufactories.—N. Y. Even. Post.

FROM NEW YORK.

Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29, 1850.

A curious, and not altogether unamusing, war is going on at present between a certain class of our city merchants and two or three of our city newspapers—the Journal of Commerce, the Herald, and the Day Book. The quarrel, if so it may be called, has its origin in the general excitement arising out of the execution of the Fugitive Slave Law. The newspapers in question are strongly desirous that the provisions of that remarkable bill should be executed, least of all opposed by such of our merchants whose best customers are found south of Mason and Dixon. The Day Book threatened to publish a list of such mercantile firms here as do business with the South, and get rich at it, at the same time that they were doing all that they can to prejudice northern men against southern institutions. The Journal of Commerce threatened pretty much the same thing, when it suggested that the call for the Union Meeting we are to have at Castle Garden to morrow night be signed by every commercial firm that desires to show the South that they are not willing to obstruct the execution of said slave law. The Herald chimed in, too, with the same spirit, but certain large dry goods houses, looking upon all this either as an attempt to levy black mail, or a plan to "sell them to the South," have come out in a card, saying their silks, and cottons, and calicoes, are in the market for sale, but not their principles. If they hate the Slave Bill, they tell us the probable loss of the Southern trade is not going to make them love it. Among the non conformists are the well known Broadway houses of Bowen & McNamee, and Chittenden & Bliss. The proportion of those who wont sign the call, however, is very small, in comparison with those who have signed it. There is no concealing the fact that this movement has been prompted by the recent announcement that Charleston merchants are going to buy no more northern coasters to carry their cotton, and no more northern goods—if they can get others. Much virtue in an "if," though, sometimes!

You will have observed among the passengers by the steamship Pacific, which arrived here from Liverpool last Sunday, one of the household names of Italy, the Prima Donna, Signorina Teresa Parodi. I mean who holds the same high rank as a singer, at Milan and Florence, as Pasta once did, or as Grisi now does in London and Paris. Indeed she is said to be a kind of Pasta revived.—True, there was not so much ado about her arrival here as there was when the great Jenny came amongst us, but there was, nevertheless, a sufficiency of popular enthusiasm evoked to justify the impression that her success in this country is certain. She makes her debut at Astor Place, on Monday evening next, in Norma.

It is not probable that Barnum will keep Jenny Lind in New York much longer, I am given to understand. Not that public anxiety to see her, and to hear her sing, is at all diminished—nor that people are less willing to pay as high prices for tickets than they ever were, but so many brilliant offers have been made by other cities, that the Napoleon of Managers is unable to resist the temptation to take the Nightingale to Havana, at all events. An agent, commissioned to treat for the Tacon Theatre there, sailed in the Ohio on Saturday last, and Jenny will probably go there about the 1st of December next, and thence direct to New Orleans.

But enough of musical matters; nay, I fear, more than enough—for as the probabilities are small, indeed, that you of the Smoky City will ever have the luxury of hearing either of the two great vocalists referred to, I am not only helping to aggravate disappointment and regret! Possibly, however, Jenny may go up the Mississippi and Ohio, on her return, but Parodi's engagements are likely to confine her to the cities of the sea board.

Quite unexpectedly, the telegraph last evening, announced the arrival of the Cunard steam ship Canada, at Halifax, from Liverpool, after the very short passage of eight days and twenty hours.—The Pacific was nearly eleven days, so that this is treading on Collin's heels pretty sharply. The most important part of her intelligence, is considered the Commercial advices, which state an advance upon Provisions, Coffee, Sugar, and Indian Corn,—with the comfortable assurance for Wal street, that American Securities were firm with an upward tendency in the London markets.

The "Crescent City," which sailed yesterday afternoon, for Chagres, took out about 150 passengers, among whom were several Roman Catholic clergymen from Europe, bound for the Oregon Mission. Your quondam correspondent "O." is also on board, having determined to go and see for himself what California is. In due time, doubtless, he will give the readers of the Gazette the benefits of his experience there.

Political excitement runs high. Both parties have completed their nominations for State officers, members of Congress, Mayor, Common Council, etc., etc., and are now busy with their Ratification meetings. Although I am no prophet, nor the son of a prophet, from what I see around me, I am quite sure that a Whig victory, in this city at any rate, is secure, but as for the State, I do not think Locofocoism, with the aid of the Barnburners, (who now-a-days refused to be classed as Locos,) will be able to elect Seymour as Governor, but we may afford them, say half a dozen members of Congress, yet even that is more than they are fairly entitled to, if a full Whig vote is brought to the polls.

The stock market, since my last, has greatly fallen off in activity, and most descriptions have suffered a slight decline. This afternoon, however, the favorable complexion of the foreign news has had an exhilarating effect, so that quotations have regained pretty much all they had previously lost. Foreign exchange for the Asia, which sails to morrow, is very firm. British Government Bills sell freely at 11½—Francs 5 17½@5,15 for 60 days. Land Warrants are selling at $125 @$130. In other respects our Money market, and matters in Wall street generally, remain as at last advised.

Under the influence of the Canada's advices, all kinds of breadstuffs, to day, are held firmer. Common to straight State Flour sold at $4,50@$4,56; good Ohio and Michigan $4,56@4,69½; pure Genesee $4,94@5. Wheat is 2@3 cents higher, but as buyers are not willing to concede the advance the sales are not large. Rye is firm at 71@72cts. Corn is held at 72c. for round yellow. Barley is higher. Sales 3000 bushels common at 85c. and 3000 do. prime at 94. Pork is not so steady, sales 700 bbls. Mess at $10,51@10,87½, and $8,31 @8,37½ for Prime. 200 bbls. Beef sold at $3,75@4,50. 700 bbls. Lard brought 7½@7½c., the latter price for strictly prime. Sales 300 bbls. Prison Whiskey at 27½@27½; Drudge is held at 27c. Cotton is unsettled. Reports of frost from the South help to strengthen the market. Fair Uplands is held at 14½c. Rio Coffee sells at 10½@11c., and Laguayra at 10½@10½. 500 bags good Java were taken at 12½c. Hops are in demand at 14@17c. for both Eastern and Western. N.

Vote on the State Ticket.

The following is the result of the late election, as far as it regards the State ticket, or the candidates for Auditor General, Surveyor General, Canal Commissioner, and the Amendment of the Constitution, so as to elect Judges by the vote of the People:

AUDITOR GENERAL.

FROM PEMBINA.—The St. Louis Republican of the 25th inst., states that Deputy Marshal Wm. Dahl, who has been engaged in taking the census at Pembina, has arrived at St. Paul. He reports the crops upon Red river bottoms entirely destroyed by the unusually high water, and many houses swept away. He reports the educational interests of Pembina not in a very flattering state. The schoolmaster has gone abroad. Of 1166 inhabitants, only twenty six can read and write—fifteen males and eleven females. When three days travel south west of Pembina, a party of seven Sioux Indians were attacked by sixty Chippewas, and six were killed and scalped. These tribes are always at war.

Progress of the Boundary Commission.

INDIANOLA—VICTORIA—THE GAUDALOUPE—THE SALADA—SAN ANTONIO, &c.

CAMP PEDRO, SAN ANTONIO DE BEXER, Sunday, Sept. 29, 1850.

DEAR SIR—I am at one time squatted like a tailor, at another on my knees, by way of a change, to give you a few lines. The lack of a table, and the dispatch of the mail this evening, will, I fear, check both pen and matter.

The Boundary Commission, after leaving Camp Ewing, on the sandy shores of Indianola, was dispatched in various detachments, as appointed, en route to Victoria, between the 1st and 8th September, to the number of 30 horsemen, 20 ambulances, (here called avalanches,) and 9 ox-teams the surveying party going afoot. Marches were made according to run of water, which, with grass, is scarce in this usually wet season,—unhealthy this year from the opposite cause. Diarrhea has been very prevalent through the country; some of the party have been attacked by it—no doubt from change of bad water for the pure element left behind. But, considering the many changes, all are wonderfully well—much credit being due, I reckon, (as all start at 3 A. M.) to that elixir vitæ, early rising.

The mules generally had to be purchased in an unbroken condition, and instead of starting fair would be seen with their heads where there tails ought to be, as if to set teamsters at defiance, or at least try their hands a bit; until, whipped and cursed not a few, they find it a decided case of go ahead. The instinct of these animals is soon evinced by acquaintance with the teamster, their keeping together at watering places by teams, kicking at any but those who look after them, and knowing the neighborhood of water, as shown by neighing.

The road, or rather beaten track, from Indian Point, winds for many miles over a sandy tract of table land, apparently not many centuries deserted by the sea, and since by the hand of man, which, from heavy rains, is formed into ridges, called hog wallows, that act as water pipes for swine, wild, yet harmless. The first ranche is 12 or 13 miles up, (the length of mile uncertain here.) and so far Nature, in her sport, seems, like a pastry cook, to have just taken her doughy ingredients and run over the yet unbounded material, rolled on a continuous run of table, sprinkled here and there with a few sprigs of garnish, and so left it, till, in kindling the oven, the table caught fire, (as the prairies after a trail,) and the unkneaded pastry was more worthless looking than King Alfred's spoiled cakes.

The ranches afford bedding and provisions, such as they are, for man (honey is good) and beast at no mean cost. Inquire not who slept in them; the most common observer can find, amid the crowd, there is an uneasy movement, such as known to those who played "the Scotch fiddle," or as seen under St. Vitus's dance affection, and the conclusion arrived at, on inquiry of the cause, is, that these ranches are swarmed with fleas, &c., and their accommodations dear and wretched beyond description.

The few white women that dwell in these hovels are like automatons, with no life like or muscular action, and whose empty sounding words are as the hollow workings of a broken sucker in a pump handle over a dry well.

There is an imperceptible ascent from the coast to Victoria, the height of which above the sea is nearly 90 feet: distance nearly 39 miles, and from observations, (Victoria) taken in the plaza, its magnetic variation, 10 02 E. of N., magnetic intensity. 1 1472; and true magnetic inclination deduced 57 deg. 2 min. 63.

This once Spanish town situated on the Guadaloupe, expelled its original settlers, and by an act forbade them any privilege of settlement within its vicinity. Since the last Mayor was murdered by the inhabitants, in a town broil, or petty legal affair, no one has sought the office, the authority of which cannot be enforced.

Population has not increased in proportion to building. The Court House (a District) built about a year back, is a little inferior to Austin State House. It and all the modern buildings are built of red, sound brick, burnt on the spot, at $7 per thousand. A printer of old, upon a lease of 21 years, is now building a bridge on the south west bend of the Guadaloupe. Its construction on this rapid and swollen river in flood—borders overflowed, banks and stages washed down—is very questionable. Below and above this point, ferries run in opposition, on a novel plan. A strong rope, secured to a tree at either side of the river, is stayed from bank to bank, and a smaller one rove through the shell of a snatch block, which is a sheave; each end of the rope takes the ferry boat, flat bottomed, fore and aft, and by slacking off either end, the current carries it to and fro, as required. Trained mules are in readiness to convey trains down and up the steep banks, that stand at about one in four—on the Victoria side, about one hundred and fifty feet of a slope; on the other, ninety feet, width of river, one hundred feet.

As a proof of readiness for a "war to the knife:" a question being put to a man on the bank, relative to the foundation of piers of the new bridge, the reply was no sooner from his lips than the lie was given, and drawn knives might have ended either, or both, but for hasty intercession.

The first interesting place beyond Victoria is old Goliad, despoiled, and in ruins, since 1826—its population some years previous was about 7,000; and but a year before its downfall 3,000—the number of women and children, unprecedented for its extent. The beautiful San Antonia River, which has many fine tributaries—the Medina, Salado, Cibello—gracefully flows by this old and new Goliad, three miles below which are the falls; thence to Aransas Bay it is navigable. The ruins of Old Town are interesting, not from reverence for antiquity, or beauty of architecture, but rather from peculiarity of structure, natural position—the old fort standing as one of the monuments of Spanish architecture. It mounts 13 heavy guns, and 40 could have been worked from its once lofty and commanding position. Here was also a Spanish Mission having a two fold object, the conversion of Indians—the promotion and security of trade.—The exterior is a square, solid, plain building, without dome or turret, few windows, (light being admitted through the lofty doorway) small and unadorned—the interior, craftily preserved from final destruction at the hands of the Mexicans, is now divided into various compartments, overhead of which the charred roofing marks the destroying hand. Atmospheric influence is fast crumbling to dust the sand stone blocks, whose foundation is on a rock of the same formation, over a strata of aluminous limestone, having a hard bed of gravel. On the other side of the river stands another Spanish mission of similar features on the ruins of which was raised a seminary for young ladies. The attraction was not truly magnetic. The rust destroyed observation where [chabod was plainly seen.

The sight of any fair creature a desire to pluck even from the Cactus, which with its prickly force arms it's pear against the snatching hand, warning not to eat—its seeds swallowed produce vomiting—the tongue indicating its presence by a scalop similar to that of the leaf.

The Southern road to San Antonio, or Sulphur Spring road, is 20 miles shorter, but very sandy, and unfit for heavy teams. About 40 miles from that place it abounds with Sulphur Springs, where the Mexicans have at certain seasons practiced Hydropathy to some little extent.

The Northern improves rapidly proceeding westward, and its numerous creeks are richly adorned with foliage and supplied with cool water. At Cabaza is a new and pretty settlement.—Cibollo, a beautiful stream—here the Indians commit many depredations, and since we arrived, Col. Reaves, with 20 mounted men, was dispatched after a party of Camanches, that must have been close on our trail, and plundered extensively in that quarter after our departure. When encamped there on Tuesday night, a Texan, living in a ranche across the stream, fled into tent, pistols in hand, with most scared face, swearing that Indians were after him, and begging for protection. He then told a story of an old man and his son that once lived in the ranche, now occupied by himself as a store, in which this old man amassed money, and on his return from San Antonio, together with his son, about eighteen months past, both were murdered and robbed of money, leaving his provisions untouched on the road. He then said, 'Some suspect me, but God knows I am innocent' The man had either an attack of delirium tremens, or the stings of remorse.

On Wednesday, after a march of 23 miles, the Commission encamped on San Antonio River, about 32 miles from town, where are a dozen ranches; the scenery from the River, (finely wooded on either side.) looking upward, beautiful.—After taking a sketch, I heard the report of a pistol near a ranche, and going up, found the Doctor over a wounded Mexican, shot by a Texan teamster, named Green—had been a ranger—that joined the expedition at Indianola. Stopped by this Mexican in carrying off some wood of his or firing, he deliberately returned to the wagon for his pistol, and again seized the wood, which the Mexican opposed his taking, and handling at the same time a pistol; whereupon Green shot him in the breast and then delivered himself up at the camp. He was deprived of his pistol and detained under a guard. The Mexican's wound bled not outwardly, though the ball was extracted, and died in three hours. He left a wife and six children and an aged father to mourn his loss. The Commission lent some pecuniary aid to those dependent on deceased, but the cries of the survivors were painful to hear. At dark Green got out and has not since been heard of, but that night three horses were missed from camp, one (private property) about the fleetest in the country. Early in the morning, wolves, though afar off, had scented the remains deprived of life, and sent forth a shrill cry for the savage repast.

The party gladly left the scene of bloodshed, and encamped on Thursday at Calabria Creek, (pretty camping ground,) below a ranche at the roadside. Here is shown on the south bank of the River, about 300 yards below the ranche, a shaft (called Don Cassiono's Folly) run for 30 yards into the sandstone with certain expectancy by one young Don Cassiono, educated in the Parisian schools, of obtaining that precious metal so unmistakeably searched for on the other side of the Rio Grande.

After encamping on the Salado River, about four miles from town, the Commission moved through San Antonio on Saturday, and pitched their tents at the head of the San Pedro, nearly two miles out. But here was to be the scene of more bloodthirsty work, and the weapon was to strike nearer home, yet by another Texan hand.—Some words arose after reaching the ground between John Tennant, of Washington, a butcher and a Texan teamster, named Turner, who, after some spiteful words to Tennant, tried to provoke him to fight, which after much forbearance, he was ready to do, the knives thrown away. On this the Texan drew off to the wagon, and when not remarked, took out his knife, (a long bowie knife,) and returning to where Tennant stood, again provoked him with words followed by two hard kicks. Tennant again desired him to put away his knife doing so himself; immediately the Texan struck at him, and Tennant had no sooner guarded the blow and caught him by the shoulder, than he was closed upon and struck below the heart by the cold blooded villain. Tennant fell. The Texan ran till closely pursued by two on horseback. Within two hours after Tennant died, conscious of the sorely trying loss his death would be to a wife and six children, sorely dependent on him. The Texan was handcuffed and brought to town, but two late for the proceedings by Coroner's inquest to go on yesterday. This morning it commenced sitting, and though continued all day was adjourned at a late hour. It is said that his trial after committal, which is sure, on the ground of wilful murder, will proceed at once. Tennant was buried to day.

PROFESSOR FILOPANTI'S LECTURE.—A respectable audience assembled on Thursday night in the lecture room of Clinton Hall, to listen to the address of Professor Filopanti, on the secret history of Rome. This is the first of a course on this subject, and judging from its character, the succeeding lectures will possess no common interest. The lecturer commenced by briefly reviewing the different empires of ancient and modern times, among the former of which he instanced Rome as the greatest, in regard to civilization, power and geographical dimensions. Her language formed still a part of all Europen languages. He then drew a comparison between Rome and America, the latter occupying, he said, the same position in the modern world that the former possessed in the ancient, with this difference, that the great modern republic, having the advantage of the experience of the past, is enabled to avoid the evils which caused the decline and final overthrow of the former.

The ancient greatness of Rome, said the lecturer, is attributable to three causes, viz: the superiority of the race, of geographical position, and of her institutions. Independent of these, he believed that there were secrect institutions strongly connected with the destinies of the eternal city.—Rome was in her early dawn a small town, possessing only three thousand foot soldiers and three hundred horse, yet her founders dared to conceive the titanic scheme of making her the capital of the world; nay, they even announced it openly, as they called the ditch dug to encompass that poor assembly of huts, mundus, the world, on the day of the foundation of the city. The spot selected by them was the most suitable to their purpose; it was in the middle of Italy, a region then covered with a population even denser than it now possesses, numbering more than twenty five millions of souls, divided into a multitude of very warlike states, each obstinately attached to its local liberty and independence. It was a more difficult task for Rome under these circumstances to conquer Italy, than to subdue the world. It was, therefore, necessary that the states of Italy should be joined with Rome for the accomplishment of this great object, and for this purpose it was determined to create a secret society.

In endeavoring to give a history of this body, he said it would be his principal aim, first, to vindicate the authenticity of the history of the four first centuries of Rome; secondly, to explain the facts of that history, apparently miraculous or absurd, by tracing them to their real causes; and thirdly, to give a hint of some of the strange, yet unmistakeable indications of mysterious ties between the very earliest history of Rome, and the late European revolutions.

Two thousand six hundred and twenty four years ago, said Professor Filopanti, Alba was at powerful city, well situated, about fifteen miles distant from what was afterwards the site of Rome. A regular succession of kings possessed the throne of Alba to the time of Aumilius, brother of Numitor, who reigned eighteen years. In the army of Aumilius, was a young officer famed for every great quality necessary to render a man perfect or great. In the revolution of Alba, he led the attack on the royal palace His name, according to Cornelius Tacitus, was Dantor Romulius. The immense influence he possessed, and the secret societies he founded, were almost entirely unknown to the ancient historians. Diligent labor enables us to say, however, that there was beyond a doubt, an ancient secret society in existence, although it is no where distinctly spoken of. Those who were admitted into the highest ranks of the Etheria, its name, were not permitted to divulge its secrets.

Romulius, the better to accomplish his designs determined to gain the affections of Rhea Silvia, daughter of King Numitor and Anthea daughter of Aumilius, in which he succeeded. The subsequent history of Rhea Silvia is well know to the most superficial student of Roman history—her dedication to the goddess Vesta, her violation of her vows, and her melancholy fate. But the lecturer traced it to different causes than those related in the history of Rome, as generally received.

The subsequent fables related in the history of Rome, in relation to the birth of the twin founders of that city, the lecturer explained, by making Romulius, and not Mars, the principal though hidden actor in the singular events of that period. The twins, according to his statement, were the sons of Romulius, and not of Mars. In his next lecture, Professor Filopanti said he would be enabled to trace at greater length the foundation and progress of the Etheria, or secret society, which he had merely alluded to in his first lecture.

REMARKABLE CASE!!
EVIDENCE IN OUR MIDST!!
MR. KIER—Sir, I, cheerfully comply with your request that I would give you an account of the almost miraculous cure of my little daughter's eye by the use of your "Petroleum."
She was attacked with a very sore eye in February or March last, when I immediately applied to the best medical aid in the city, by whom it was pronounced "a very bad eye" and all gave me no hope of doing her any good. After which I took her into the country to an old lady, who had been very successful in curing eyes. She told me that her case was hopeless, as she would certainly lose not only that one, but also that the other would follow—it being a scrofulous affection of the blood. And I do certify that at the time my father (J. B. Vashon) came to the conclusion that we had better try your "Petroleum," and was ENTIRELY BLIND of one eye. It is now about two months since she began its use, and she can now see with both eyes as good as ever she did; and, as far as I can tell, I believe she has, with the blessing of he Almighty, been cured by "Petroleum."
Yours, respectfully,
M. FRANCES VASHON COLDER.
