IN THE GARDEN OF LIFE.

BY CHARLES BUXTON GOING, IN SUCCESS MAGAZINE. Ah, when I first began to plant Life's garden close, I did not know (For I was young and ignorant) What choice of seeds I ought to sow.

'And many things I planted there Alas! turned out but barren seeds, 'And others died for want of care, And many more proved noxious weeds.

But in the midmost place of all A little slip grew, unaware, And it had burgeoned fair and tall Before I knew that it was there.

Around its head the sunlight drew The sweet earth drew around its root, And fairer still in form it grew To bud, to blossom, and to fruit.

And now, so radiant it grows, The garden is a magic bower— Spaces of perfume and of rose. Soft-veiled with beauty and with flower.

and the second state of th A PLOT FRUSTRATED By HELEN FORREST GRAVES.

It looked like a pretty illumina tion, the French cottage-window, with the shaded lamp burning on the ladies need no suggestions." centre-table and the muslin curtain blowing backward and forward in the lilac-scented breeze; and the tableau of two young lovers sitting together on the sofa was prettier still.

of seventeen, dark-browed and roselipped, with a skin like the velvety cream of a magnolia leaf, dark-gray eyes and long, luxuriant hair coiled in a mass of heavy braids around her head. Montagu Lacy was seven-andtwenty, with Saxon features, curls of a deep, golden hue and a silky brown mustache twisting roguishly up at the ends

"But I say, Leslie, you will answer me to-morrow?" pleaded the young man.

"I don't know, Mr. Lacy-it's so sudden."

"So is everything sudden in this ing. world."

"I don't know what mamma would say," hesitated pretty Leslie.

"Shall I take measures to ascertain?" solicitously asked Mr. Montagu Lacy.

"Certainly not," Leslie answered firmly. "I have not decided as yet myself."

"Yes, but Leslie, it's confoundedly hard on a fellow."

"Perhaps it is, perhaps it isn't. You must go now, in any event."

"Must 1?" Mr. Lacy arose with a comical grimace. "To-morrow, then?" "I won't promise."

"Then you are a cruel, hardhearted girl, and that's all I have to say on the subject. However, I shall try my luck, whatever may befall."

And, bending lightly, he touched his lips to the rosy dimples of her finger-joints as he went away.

Miss Henderson witnessed the whole scene-heard all the words spoken in the murmurous silence of the summer twilight from her vantage-point behind the hedge of pinkblossomed American laurel. She bit her lip, and, if the "baleful eye" could blast like the forked flash of "Beg your pardon," said Mr. Lacy, laughing, "but I think you young

"Mr. Lacy, you won't refuse?" "Refuse? No, not if I really can be of any use; but-"

"Allow us to be the judge of that," cried Malvina, with gay imperious-Leslie Brown was a beautiful girl ness, as she drew him into the library and reached for standish and rosecolored paper. "Now you must write a genuine love-letter.

"How shall I begin it?" said Mr. Lacy, good-humoredly yielding the point without betraying a vestige of the impatience he really felt.

"Oh, any way. 'Dear Malvina, just for fun." "Very well."

And Mr. Lacy's swift pen scratched away over the paper, dashing off the lines with ready inventive genius.

"How will this do?" he asked, and read over what he had been compos-

Miss Henderson clapped her hands exultingly.

"Charming-perfect!" she cried. 'How poor, dear Joe will be victimized! But you haven't signed itwhat ought we to 'wind up' with?"

quite a different tale when you see snatch it back. the letter I received from him tonight.'

Leslie smiled; what else could she do, secure as she was in Montagu's adoration of herself. She could only pity her cousin's monstrous delusion.

But Miss Henderson was prepared with testimony to back up her words. She unfolded the note and laid it on the table.

"You will believe his own words, if you don't believe mine," said she, laughingly; and the blood seemed to turn to ice in Leslie's pulses at the sight of the well-known handwriting. "My own darling," it began, but she could decipher no more. Her head swam, her lips quivered. "I do not wish to read it," she said hurriedly. "I-I have no wish to pry into the secrets of others." 'But that is entirely a mistaken idea, Leslie. We both wish you to know our plans. Let me read it to you, if you will not look at it yourself.'

She murmured out the flowing sentences of love-smitten rhetoric which the unconscious victim had penned so merrily not fifteen minutes before, but Leslie Brown scarcely heard them. It seemed so impossible-so monstrously absurd-that Montagu Lacy should dare to make open love at one and the same time to herself and this black-eyed, vindictive old maid! That he, whom she had deemed the very impersonation of everything that was noble and chivalric, should be so utterly false! If he were untrue, then what and who, in all the world, could be pronounced real?

ically-sweet voice broke harshly in on the thread of her reflections.

"Do tell me how to answer him?" she murmured. "You see how he presses for an immediate reply. What shall I say?"

"I-I don't know," said Leslie, pressing her hand on her forehead. 'My head aches-I don't think I am very well this evening. Some other time, Malvina, I will answer your questions."

And Leslie Brown, whose selfcommand had barely extended to the uttering of these incoherent sen-I tences, hurried out of the room.

Pat's Pathetic Passion.

POLICEMAN PAT peruses picture puzzle prize proffer. Premium promised person purchasing, placing painted

Patentum promised person purchasing, placing painted pieces, producing perfect pictures. Pat ponders, purchases—paying prodigious price—pre-pares place, puts pieces promiscuously, pursues particular plan, pompously prophesies prompt performance. Pieces proceed perversely. Pat pauses perturbed. Prob-lem perplexes. Prolonged perplexity produces panic. Plen-tiful poteen potetions tiful poteen potations prove pernicious. Protracted puzzling produces profuse perspiration, pant-ing, pain, pallor, palpitation. Pills procure portial palliation.

Pat persists, perseveres, protests perfection possible. Punishment pursues pertinacious policeman. Poor Pat pays penalty, perishes pitifully, prone, prostrate.

Parents provide proper pall. Priest publicly pronounces panegyric. Paper prints pertinent paragraphs praising popular promfnent policeman.

Pat planted permanently .- Camilla J. Knight, in Life.

"Oh, that is simple enough. | Malvina watched her with a sly summer lightning, Leslie Brown 'Yours devotedly,' or 'Yours until cat-like smile. would have been at that instant smit- death,' or some such rhodomontade," "I think I have done for you, young little maliciously; "but you'll tell it to Mr. Lacy ere Malvina could

"This will be sufficient explanation," she said, haughtily. "The man who can write such a letter as this to one woman, while he is making love to another, scarcely deserves the title of gentleman."

Mr. Lacy eyed the document with amazement.

"I did write this letter," said he; "but it was to no woman. It was written to Joe Thorneycroft."

But Malvina Henderson did not stay to await any further developments. Murmuring some incoherent sentence about a forgotten engagement, she darted back into the house, and fifteen minutes afterward she had the mortification of seeing Leslie and Montagu stroll past the windows in all the radiant abstraction from the outer world that belongs, of right, to true lovers.

For Cupid had befriended his own, and Malvina's shallow plot had utterly failed in breaking two hearts .--New York Weekly.

INDOOR EXERCISE FOR HEALTH AND DEVELOPMENT.

Dr. W. R. C. Latson has something vides the people in general into three classes: trained athlete, those who exercise at random, and those who nal. neglect exercise altogether. In one place Dr. Latson says:

"The ordinary 'professor' knows no more about the principles of bodily development than he does about ancient Coptic. And the poor layman, groping to find some guide to a correct method of physical training, must necessarily fail to obtain from his desultory experiments any real or lasting benefit.

"In the first place, current methods of physical culture aim at factitious results. The man is trained, not to develop a fine physique, powers of endurance, grace, and general bodily efficiency, but to win at some particular event.

"Of course the poor little people who exercise at random or who fall into the net of the wily 'professor,' get little or nothing for their time and money. The men and women who write the articles or who prepare the material for the 'courses' as a rule know but little, if anything, more about the matter than those who are held up for the price of the instruction. The result is failure to realize any great or lasting benefit from the time and effort put forth."

In conclusion, Dr. Latson describes a system of ten simple exercises which will result in an increase of health. strength, endurance, and bodily efficiency which will be a surprise and delight to the student.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Some men wear themselves out, and others simply rust.

Many a man makes a noise like a virtue to drown the clamor of his vices.

Lots of us who are sure we are right never go ahead.

DANGER SIGNALS.

Sick kidneys give unmistakable signals of distress. Too frequent or scanty urinary passages, backache, headache and dizzy Tells A Story spells tell of disordered kidneys. Neglect of these warnings may prove fatal. Begin using Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure sick kidneys.

says: "I was in such poor health I could scarcely attend to my housework. My back ached as if it were being pulled apart, and my feet and ankles were badly swollen. The kidney secretions were in terrible condition. I was extremely nervous and my heart palpitated violently. Short use of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me and soon my whole system was renovated."

Remember the name-Doan's. For sale by all dealers. 50 cents a box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Corset Reflection.

The wonderful endurance power of women is evidenced again by the fact that a husky New York college man, who was rehearsing in a girl's part in very interesting to say in The Outing Magazine regarding exercise. He di-vides the people in general into three the the second that the had been wearing a tightly laced corset for a couple of hours .- Topeka State Jour-

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflamma-tion, allays pain, cures wind colic, 25c a bottle.

Women As Motorists.

Unusual physique is not necessary for the woman motorist. Neither sex needs extraordinary muscular development in automobiling, and almost any woman not an invalid can master its mysteries quite as well as a man, provided she has the will and the patience to acquire the know-how. Certainly in the sphere of patience woman by nature is equipped to give man a long handicap. The woman motorist is not half so likely as man is to swear and call loudly for a tow when anything goes wrong with the car. She will more prohably set to work to find will more probably set to work to find the trouble and remedy it quite as thoroughly as if she were cleaning out the kitchen range. Remember, never-theless, that, though sex and slight physique are in no sense disabilities to the woman who wants to do her own motoring, and though her feminine patience and intuition stand her in good stead, she must not expect to succeed by intuition alone.-Outing Magazine.

Danger in Gold Mines.

More than 2,000 prospectors are waiting on the Yukon banks for the clearing away of the ice fields to go down that Alaskan river to the new gold deposits discovered last fall. On the theory propounded by President Taft that the high cost of living is due to the increased output of gold, con-sumers may feel alarmed lest these new fields yield much more of the precious metal. But of course the prospectors are not troubled in that way.-Brooklyn Citizen.

Miss Henderson's cooing, hypocritten to the ground.

"You are so sure of him, my young lady, are you?" said Miss Henderson to herself. "Just wait and see. There may be two words to that counseling me." bargain."

One instant Malvina Henderson stood thinking. To let Pretty Leslie Brown run away with the prize for which she had schemed and plotted so long was entirely opposite to all her long-conceived policy-and yet-

"I have it," said Malvina, to her- laughed Mr. Lacy. self. "Yes, I have it. Nothing short of death or madness will part them, and jealousy is a species of madness.

Hurrying through the shrubbery, already wet with dew, as swift and that evening. noiseless as a gliding wreath of white mist, Miss Henderson met Montagu Lacy at the front door, just as he had found his hat and lighted the cigar which was to accompany him on his long evening walk.

"Mr. Lacy-oh, please don't throw away your cigar," she said, coaxingly, and Malvina Henderson could assume a charmingly pleading air when she chose, "but I've walked so fast up from the lodge, for fear you should not a favorite with the fading passe right to deny me an answer thus." be gone-and I've such a favor to brunette. ask you."

"A favor, Miss Henderson?" "There, now," said Malvina, with a sweet little laugh, "I knew you would be surprised, but remember!' holding up a taper finger, "it's a profound secret.'

"Oh, certainly."

"Well, it's leap-year, you know, and we girls are going to send Joe Thorneycroft a love letter-just for a joke, you know-and we don't know what on earth to write, andand-won't you just give us the rough draft of one for us to copy?"

"Yes, you. You know you've read such lots of delightful English novels, and you can give us just the right idea.'

glowing words. "Now sign it. I am so stupid, you see; I need all your good nature in "Just the initials-in my case it would be M. L."

"How can I ever thank you enough," said Malvina, rapturously, as she folded the little pink billet. "But you'll never let Thorneycroft know that I had a finger in the pie," son. And, if smiles were sunshine, Montagu Lacy's homeward way would have been one illumination supposed him likely to pursue.

entered the room where Leslie Brown was deluding herself with the idea that she was reading.

"Leslie," she said, earnestly, want your advice."

Miss Brown looked up, rather surprised. Although they were second at all. consins, she was not particularly

"My advice, Malvina?" she repeated doubtfully.

"Yes," laughed and blushed Mal- scolded me for it before." vina, "about getting married. I am going to confide in you, my dear. I have had an offer."

Leslie arched her fair brows, inno-motioning to Malvina. "Do I?" said Mr. Lacy, with rather cently, and Miss Henderson went on, with a well-affected air of pretty confusion.

"From-but you can never guess Brown, to explain yourself?" from whom, if you were to try for a hundred years. From Montagu filled with molten fire instead of Lacy."

Leslie Brown grew pale, and then scarlet.

"You must be mistaken, Malvina. He---

And then she stopped. "Oh, I dare say," said Malvina, a her heart like a sword, and extended Philadelphia Press.

all your rosy cheeks and big, gray eyes! A little maneuvering, and I shall bring Mr. Montagu Lacy to my feet, now that this dangerous rival is out of the way." Mr. Lacy's astonishment, the next day, on receiving Leslie's indignant message of "not at home," was extreme.

"What does it all mean?" he muttered. "I will see her, or-"

And he sat himself resolutely down "Never-never, upon my word!" on the front piazza, thus laying regulation fervently asseverated Miss Hender- lar siege to the unconscious Leslieon the front piazza, thus laying regua line of tactics entirely different from anything Miss Henderson had

'Here I sit until midnight-or un-Five minutes afterward, Malvina til she comes out!" he told himself. Presently she came, but not alone. Malvina Henderson was with her, who was rather more discomfited than Leslie at the sudden apparition which confronted them. But he did not notice the elder of the two ladies

"Leslie," he exclaimed, reproachpartial to Malvina, and she had rea-son to suppose that she herself was ing violently. "Leslie, you have no

"Do not call me 'Leslie,'" she cried, indignantly.

"Why should I not? You never

"You owe all your sweet words and familiar expressions to this lady," said Leslie, drawing back, and a puzzled air. "Well, I really wasn't aware of it. Will you please, Miss

Malvina felt as if her veins were blood; she would have given worlds foresaw was coming. Leslie caught from the dainty ruffled pocket of Miss Henderson's silk the draining of all stagnant pools of apron the note which had pierced

The man who is blind to his own he said, hurriedly scratching off the lady," she thought to herself, "with interests seldom interests any one else.

> The man who is too busy to make friends seldom succeeds.

Even when charity begins at home, t usually ends with some foreign missionary.

A plain duty is like a plain person. It is always the least attractive.

When they get on the scales is about the only time some men ever have their own weigh.

The surest way to shatter an idol is to marry it.

Blessed are the meek, for they generally are married.

The trouble with a bore is that when he gets wound up he doesn't

The ball player should always remember that a hit in time saves nine. Some people are so lucky that if they should jump from the frying pan into the fire they would put the fire out .- From "Dyspeptic Philosophy," in the New York Times.

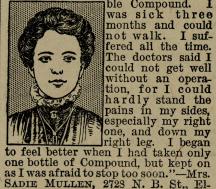

Clean-Up Week.

It is 'interesting to note that, following the worthy example of some smaller cities, it is proposed to have what may be termed a "clean-up week." Anent this, the excellent advice given from time to time by Dr. Neff, director of the department of public health, is full of good, practical suggestions regarding the best methods of sanitation, the removal of rubbish from cellars, the cleaning of dirt and dried leaves from drain pipes and roof gutters, the cleaning of dark and unsightly corners by some disinfectant wash and the admission of sunshine to rooms ordinarto escape the explanations that she ily darkened and neglected, the proper care and cleansing of rugs, carpets, bedding and clothing and water in cellars and back yards.

WasCured byLydiaE.Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Elwood, Ind.—"Your remedies have cured me and I have only taken six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegeta-ble Compound. I was sick three months and could not walk. I suf-fered all the time. The doctors said I

SADIE MULLEN, 2728 N. B. St., Elwood, Ind.

Why will women take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

Vegetable Compound? For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ail-ments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregulari-ties, periodic pains, backache, indiges-tion, and nervous prostration. If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vege-table Compound will help you, write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.