Not Mad.

Many "mad dog" scares and frights come where a dog has eaten too much meat, or fowl food, has become overheated, or suffers from lack of water. Again, mild strychnine poisoning in a dog may be mistaken for rabies. Many say there is no such thing as hydrophobia. Suppose there is not. Anyhow, dog bites seem dangerous, if their fright kills strong men. Friends of dogs and owners of valuable ones, by aiding to keep homeless dogs off the streets, will lend a helping hand against the prevalent and spreading dog prejudice which has grown up hereabout in the last year or two.—New York Press.

Constipation causes and aggravates many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. The favorite family laxative.

Telescope of Galileo.

Very few people are aware that the first practical telescope—the one which Galileo used in discovering the satellites of Jupiter, in January, 1610—is still in existence and preserved at the Museum of Physics and Natural History in Florence. It is about 300 years ago since this instrument was first turned toward the heavens. Unlike the present astronomical type, it had a concave instead of a convex eye-piece, just like the opera glasses now in use. When Galileo first exhibited his new telescope to the dogs and an enthusiastic assembly on the tower of St. Mark's, in Venice, he was overwhelmed with honors, because it was thought that the instrument would give the soldiers and sailors of the republic a great advantage over their enemies.—Strand Magazine.

Careless of Life.

Each year there are deaths and injuries due to carelessness exceeding those of any year in the late bloody Civil War. It is estimated that almost 500,000 deaths and injuries take place each year in the ordinary course of business which are due either to the carelessness of some employe or the worse than carelessness of the employer. Human life is less safeguarded in this country than in any other in the civilized world. It is a terrible indictment, and, unfortunately, it is undeniable.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

To permit a motorist to explore the dark corners of his car with a light and yet leave his hands free, there has been invented an incandescent lamp and reflector to fasten to the forehead.

IN WOMAN'S REALM

Woman's Clubhouse.

Mrs. Cornelius Zabriskie is chairman of the committee which proposes to build a woman's clubhouse in Brooklyn at a cost of $100,000. At a mass meeting held the other day in the chapel of Packer Institute stock subscriptions to the amount of $20,000 were received. The largest single contribution was that of the Brooklyn Women's Club, which guaranteed $7500. The building will not be started until the committee has the full $100,000.—New York Sun.

For Heavy Linen Waist.

Lace insertion as a part of the embroidery design is not so frequent as in past seasons, but there is a rich pattern just out requiring a shoulder strap and three long upright strips of wide linen lace back and front upon the bodice sections.

At the end of each of these, which is the bust line, a large flower is embroidered in coarse cotton floss, and the blossom is repeated on the upper part of the sleeve where the shoulder strap ends.

The flower is so designed that its petals run upward and surround the Fewer turbans are seen as the season advances.

Skirts for evening dresses are somewhat fuller.

Waists of black large meshed cable net made over white dotted net have shallow yokes of Irish crochet.

Long pearl and diamond chains are in high favor, and old cameo brooches linked together are made into collarettes.

The newest belts for shirtwaists are wider than have been worn, and leather girdles of all colors are much in favor.

Velvet ribbon in the leading colors is combined with flowers for the trimming of hats. It is also used for belts.

There is a revival of the use of velvet bags, and many of plain black, beautifully mounted, are seen in the shops.

Gold colored straw trimmed with black is a combination of many of the most attractive modes. Some of the best hat decorations are gold and silver.

The centre strip of lace on the blouse extends further down than the two side ones, thus giving a pointed, becoming shape to the trimming.—Philadelphia North American.

Make Yourself Beautiful.

Expression is the greatest of all beautifiers, as well as uglifiers.

A girl may have quantities of golden hair, pink cheeks, regular features, but if she has a silly, self-satisfied expression no one will consider her beautiful.

Or a girl may have very few claims to regular beauty, but be glorified by a beautiful expression of face, and everyone will think her lovely.

It is sweetness, goodness and intelligence that make the highest type of beauty. Those qualities last much longer than coloring; the older their possessor grows the more lovely she will become.

There are many ways in which you can improve yourself, if you wish to become better looking.

Take your figure, for example: If you are flat-chested and round-shouldered, take simple exercises to develop the one and straighten the other defect.

Hold your head up; don't poke it forward. If your hair is lanky and oily, wash it frequently and dress it becomingly.—Scottish American.

A Fancy Dress Wedding.

Poulbot, a French caricaturist, having determined upon so commonplace a step as getting married, decided that he would be married in no commonplace way. He asked all his friends to the wedding, but there was a sine qua non condition attached to the invitation. You had to go with a "made-up head" or you would not be admitted. Preferably you were requested to make up as a country cousin at a village wedding. Some guests arrived as ancient peasants, others as village idiots. There were several bluff 'Squires and rural elderly gentlemen with means, a number of retired officers and exuberant uncles from the South, besides fierce military gentlemen from the hottest stations of Algeria. The only persons who wore their natural physiognomies were the couple most concerned. They had drawn the line at making up themselves as a burlesque bride and a comic bridegroom.—Washington Herald.

Anything that is draped is fashionable. Sashes are with us again in glorious array.

lace design that looks so well in colors to match the hat has proved the favorite.

Lingerie gowns, guiltless of a collar, are frequently worn with a narrow black velvet band at the throat, on which may be a diamond or other jeweled ornament.

As has been noted before, the Greek coiffure is the most fashionable. The braid around the head and the turban swirl are absolutely out of style over the sea.

There is a late fancy among some Parisian costumers for making the belts of the more elaborate gowns of a color in contrast to the whole color scheme of the garment.

Belts of flowered ribbon had bands of black ribbon velvet over it, studded with steel beads. At back and front was a narrow buckle of the velvet studded with the steel.

A detachable frill and detachable turnover collar is an addition to a smart white linen shirtwaist of medium weight, which has the front covered with quarter-inch tucks.

Two shades of dull blue cloth with pipings of velvet, and small yoke and collar of deep coffee color lace, are combined in a handsome calling costume. The hat is a small toque with a blue plume.

Lace veils dyed to match the color of the hats with which they are worn are the latest. They are not pinned in, by the way, but hang down straight from the brim—probably necessitated by the immense shapes.

Future Food Faker.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the Government's brilliant food expert, was talking about a notorious case of food adulteration.

"The morals of these people!" he said. "It is incredible. But I know a little boy who will grow up and join them some day."

"I was walking one day in a meadow when I saw this little boy gathering mushrooms."

"Have you had good luck?" I asked.

"Fair," he answered, showing me his basket.

"But I gave a cry of alarm."

"Why, my lad, I said, 'those are toadstools you've got. They're poison, deadly poison!'"

"He tipped me a restaurant wink."

"Oh, they ain't for eatin', sir," he said; 'they're for sale.'—Washington Star.

Generous.

"Come here, Tommy," called his mother from the edge of the pond, as she concealed the birch switch behind her.

"What do you want, ma?" asked the little boy, suspiciously.

"I want to give you something."

"I—I ain't doing nuttin', ma!"

"Then I shall be even more liberal. I am going to give you something for nothing."—Chicago News.

Heaven on Earth

By Winifred Black

MRS. Cornelia Botkin died in the California penitentiary the other day.

And the day after she died they took her body up to a little village in the green hills of California and buried her.

There was a funeral at the little old house where her parents lived, and her mother and father sat together at the head of her coffin, and the neighbors came and brought flowers, and the preacher from the little country church preached a simple, kindly sermon, and the village choir sang "In the Sweet Bye and Bye" and "Come Ye Disconsolate" quite as if the woman whose body lay in the coffin had been a good woman all her life and had never been tried and sent to the penitentiary for murder.

For Mrs. Botkin's father and mother did not know that she had died in prison.

They did not know that she had ever seen the inside of a prison anywhere, and they never heard of the Botkin case, which was one of the most famous criminal cases ever tried on the Pacific Coast.

There is a little paper in the little village where Mrs. Botkin's old father and mother lived, and the paper printed every day accounts of the trial while it was going on.

But they called it the Dunning case and spoke always of Mrs. Botkin as the accused, and the old man and the old woman read the paper and talked the famous murder case over together and never even dreamed that "the accused" was their own daughter.

And all the little village took hold of hands and formed around the old people a cordon of silence, and woe be to any one who dared to try to break through.

We are prone to think of heaven as a place far removed from everything we know here on this earth. But oh, that little village out there, nestling in the green, green hills of smiling California! I wonder if the angels do not look down upon it and smile.—New York American.

No Danger of Over-Population

By Bolton Hall

It has been said that the time is not far off when the United States will be unable to support her inhabitants. But those who think that have either forgotten or have not reckoned with the new intensive cultivation of the land. The island of Guernsey, in the south of England, is from four to seven miles in length, and about four miles in width. It has a resident population of 41,000, and a visiting population of 30,000 a year, which it supports. About $4,500,000 worth of farm and garden stuff, or a little less than $400 worth to the acre, is produced annually, with only 11,623 acres under cultivation.

Now, if the whole State of New York were cultivated and populated as that is cultivated and populated, it would yield annually $15,000,000,000 worth of farm and garden produce, and support 233,941,473 people—that is, about four times the population of the entire United States. Wherein then lies the danger of overpopulation? Only in monopolizing and holding idle the land; where there are unused lands there are bound to be idle hands for all that we eat, use, and wear comes from the land by labor. "Over-population" and "pauper labor" are not the works of nature, and if they should ever come, the people themselves will be responsible.—Practical Ideals.
