CENTRE HALL REPORTER.

FRIDAY, MAY 21st 1860.

A Romance of True Love.

The death of a Miss Jackson, of this city, on Thursday last week, was followed by that of Mr. W. L. Hudgens, the Saturday following. The former peacefully breathed her last after a long and painful illness; the latter, in a paroxysm of grief, burst a blood vessel and died almost instantly. The deceased were betrothed, and the consummation of their dreams of love had been deferred from time to time, until finally Miss Jackson was prostrated with sickness.
Unwilling, even then, to be debarred her presence, Mr. H. was admitted to the sick room, where none were more attentive to the every want of the sufferer than himself, so far as the delicacy of his position would permit. A sister of Miss Jackson was, for days and nights, the sharer of his watchfulness. Her more feeble nature, however, sunk under the burden of fatigue and sleepless apprehension, which she vainly struggled to sustain and at last Mr. Hudgens was left alone, with barely the assistance of a servant. The object of his solicitude and devotion, day by day, became more feeble. He scarcely left her bedside. Sleep became a stranger to his eyes, and even food was put away by him. But even such devotion could not turn the penetrating barb of death, and finally the eyes of the sufferer closed forever upon the tearful face ever above her and her hands grew cold and rigid in death while yet in the warm clasp of his to whom it was so shortly to have been given in life and love. This was on Thursday.
On Friday the remains of Miss Jackson were followed to the grave. He who had been ever present at her bedside by her bier. His heart went down into the grave.
The day following the burial, the fatigue to which Mr. Hudgens had subjected himself began to overcome him. He sank prostrated upon his bed, and giving way to the poignancy of his feelings, burst a blood vessel, and in less than five minutes his heart had ceased to suffer for it was cold forever. The next day he, too was followed to the tomb and placed by the side of his betrothed.—St. Louis Times.

HEAVY BANK ROBBERY.

Clearfield, Pa., May 13.—The County National Bank of Clearfield was opened by burglars last night. The vault was chiseled into and the burglar-proof safe broken open. About fifteen thousand dollars in cash were stolen, and four thousand five hundred dollars in United States bonds, two thousand dollars of which were registered. A reward of one thousand dollars is offered. It will not affect the solvency of the bank.
Miss Susan B. Anthony says in her paper: "The women of the Revolution canvassed Kansas, Illinois, Missouri, New York and the District of Columbia, and never kissed one son of Adam over two years old." That is, perhaps, one reason they meet with no better success. Let the revolutionary sisterhood try it again, changing the programme so far as not to kiss any "son of Adam" or any other man under voting age. Possibly a few good looking young ladies, to take charge of the osculatory department, while the elders devoted themselves to speech-making, would improve the chances of the canvass.

Sixteen Hundred Miners Suspend Work—Terrible Accident.

Seranton, May 13.—At Pittston, this morning, sixteen hundred men and boys employed in the mines at that place and some by the Pennsylvania Coal company, suspended work.
By the explosion of a fire damp this morning at the Mount Pleasant mine, near this city, five men and one boy were badly burned. One of the men, Charles Sutter, will probably die.

A tax on bachelors from thirty years upwards is proposed in Paris.

Mrs Lincoln has retired to the inexpensive seclusion of lodgings in Frankfurt, Germany.

The radicals have an exceeding fondness for loyal men particularly for the soldier, they reward such thus:

Gen. Durbin Ward fought for the Union at Chickamauga. General James Longstreet fought against the Union at the same time and place. General Durbin Ward is removed by President Grant from the office of District Attorney at Cincinnati. General James Longstreet is appointed to a fat office at New Orleans by President Grant.
General Mitchell commanded the United States troops at Valverde and whipped the rebels. Colonel Crow commanded the rebels at Valverde and was whipped by the United States troops. General Mitchell has been re-removed by President Grant from the Governorship of New Mexico where the battle of Valverde was fought. Colonel Crow has been appointed by President Grant to be Governor of New Mexico.
General Knipe entered the Union army when the war began, and rose from the ranks by brave services to the command of a brigade. After the war was over, he was appointed Postmaster at Harrisburg. He has been removed by General Grant, and George Bergner, who staid at home and made a fortune out of the public calamities, has been appointed in his place.
President Johnson permitted Grant's father and brother-in-law to remain in office. Grant removed President Johnson's son from a petty office in Tennessee, and removed General Blair from being a Director of the Pacific Railroad.
