CENTRE HALL, PA., March 11th 1870

Papal Infallibility.

As the readers of the Reporter no doubt may wish to read both sides of this question, which may now be engaging the Ecumenical Council assembled at Rome, we will here furnish the pre-and con upon the doctrine. The question of Infallibility is a very troublesome one to settle. Petitions and counter petitions on the subject are being circulated among the fathers. In all probability, the dogma will not be created, although it will be proposed.
The petition which is being circulated in reference to it, by those who wish to have it proclaimed, is as follows:

"The undersigned, Fathers of the Council, humbly and earnestly beg that the Sacred Council will deign to sanction in words so clear as to admit of no doubt, that the Sacred Pontiff is incapable of all error whenever he instances regarding faith and morality establishes and commands what all Christians should believe and retain, and what they should refuse and condemn."

The Paris Monde publishes the Latin text and a translation of the memorial drawn up at the Ecumenical Council in favor of the proposition declaring the infallibility of the Pope.
It commences by saying that the primacy of the jurisdiction of the Roman Pontiff, the successor of Saint Peter, is clearly taught in the Sacred Scriptures; that the universal tradition of the Church teaches by the words and acts of the Holy Fathers, as well as the decisions of several Councils, that the doctrinal judgments of the Roman Pontiff on matters of faith are unchangeable. Declarations from the proceedings of the Councils of Lyons and Florence are cited in favor of the super-eminent authority of the Holy See, and reference is made to the contrary opinions held by the so-called Catholics, and the disastrous results which would follow from their tolerance. Extracts are given from the records of the Council at Baltimore in 1865, and other recent ecclesiastical assemblies, to show the pronounce given to the dogma of infallibility, and the present necessity for its adoption.
The bitterness of the attacks directed against the Holy See is pointed out, and it is said that if the Church now hesitates to pronounce in favor of infallibility, it will be a cause of triumph to her enemies, and embolden their hostility. It is denied that this doctrine will place heretics and scismatics at a still greater distance from the Church; in any case the interests of Catholics require a definite decision upon this grave matter, and mensur-ing the truth instead of being tugged away, will be the more attractive "seeing what forms the principal foundation of the unity and solidity of the Church." The opposition of those lost to the faith is only a pretext to embarrass the Church. In conclusion it is stated that a decision of the Council in favor of infallibility will be received with joy by the Catholic people.

The German and some other bishops have prepared, and presented the following petition to the Pope, opposing the doctrine of Infallibility. They say:

Most Holy Father—A printed document has reached us wherein is set forth, for subscription by the Fathers of the Council, a petition begging the Ecumenical Synod to decree the authority of the Roman Pontiff as supreme, and therefore free from error, when, in virtue of his apostolic power, he speaks to all the faithful matters of faith and morals. It is certainly wonderful that the judges of faith should be invited to put forth a declaration, signed by their own hands, as to their decision before even the subject has been discussed. But in so grave a matter, we have decided to appeal to yourself, Most Holy Father, because, being appointed by the Lord to tend his sheep and lambs, you have at heart the care of the souls redeemed by the blood of Christ, and commis-erate with paternal affection the evils by which they are threatened. The times have gone by when Catholics were wont to call in question the rights of the Apostolic See. There is no one who denies that, as the body is incomplete without the head, so it is impossible to hold a council representing the universal church without the successor of St. Peter, while all obey the commands of the Holy See most readily.

Besides which, the Council of Trent decreed what was to be held by the faithful, concerning the authority of the Roman Pontiff, as also did the Council of Florence, whose decree on this matter should be in every thing the more sacredly observed, because it was affirmed by the consent of the Latin and Greek churches, and will form the basis for the restoration of the union, if the Lord should deign to turn His merciful eyes towards the East.
Moreover, as at the present day the Christian Church has to sustain a new and hitherto unheard-of struggle with those who rise up against religion as though it were a contrivance for the destruction of the human race, it appears by no means advisable to impose upon the Catholic world, tempted on every side by so many snares, burdens heavier than those imposed by the Fathers of Trent. For the rest, although the universal church, Bellarmine declared that "definitions of faith depend chiefly from Apostolic tradition and the consent of the churches," and although a general council is the shortest way for ascertaining the opinion of the universal church, yet at the well known council held at Jerusalem by the apostles and elders, and down to the Council of Nicea, innumerable errors of various churches were expelled and destroyed by the decisions of the successor of St. Peter, approved by the consent of the universal church.
It is indubitable that all Christ's faithful owe true obedience to the decrees of the Apostolic See; moreover, learned and pious men teach that whatever the sovereign Pontiff, speaking ex cathedra, decrees concerning faith and morals, is binding, even without the consent of the churches in any way declared. Still we cannot pass over in silence the fact that there are grave difficulties arising out of the sayings and acts of the Fathers of the Church and from genuine historical documents and the teaching of the church itself; and unless these are entirely solved, the doctrine commended to the Christian people in the above mentioned petition, as revealed by God, cannot be proposed. But our mind recoils from discussing these matters, and we rely upon your good will in asking that the necessity for such a discussion may not be imposed upon us. Besides, exercising our episcopal functions over some of the chief Catholic nations, we know from daily experience the state of affairs among them. We are convinced that the definition demanded would furnish new arms to the enemies of religion for stirring up discord in the Catholic world, even among men of the greatest distinction, and we are certain that in Europe—at least to the governments of our nations—it would afford a cause of excuse for invading the remaining rights of the church.
We lay these things before your Holiness with the sincerity which is due to the common father of the faithful, imploring that by your order the doctrine, the sanction of which is demanded, may not be brought before the Ecumenical Council for discussion.
Finally, we prostrate ourselves at your feet, and beg your apostolic blessings for ourselves and for those whose spiritual welfare is committed to our charge. We are the most humble, obedient, and devoted servants of your Holiness—Signed—The Archbishops of Prague, Sienna, Olmutz, Bamberg, Munich, Kalocza, Cologne, Salzburg, Lemberg; the Bishops of Breslau, Hildesheim, Trévis, Onabréck, Mayence, vant, Gurk, Trieste, Budweis, Euf-

EDUCATIONAL.
PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF POTTER TWP.
We are opposed to "cramping" the minds of children with too many studies, but think the tendency is in the opposite direction. Mental arithmetic is taught in all except one, and in that one will be taught hereafter. Orthography, Reading, Writing, Written Arithmetic, Geography and Grammar are taught in all. Phonetic spelling is practiced in nearly all. Map drawing, in connection with Geography, is taught in the Grammar school at Potter's Mills; is recommended in all the others. Composition is taught in all the schools except four. Physiology is taught orally in two schools only.
It is not desirable to attempt an extended course of instruction in this branch in our common schools, but some information should be imparted by oral lessons, in all our schools. It is estimated that more than one-half of the sickness and premature death which occur might be avoided by following proper hygienic precepts, and since moral education is complete unless it embrace the physical and moral with the mental—it becomes our duty as teachers to see to this. How many are there who through ignorance of hygienic laws pervert and abuse the temple in which they live; the result of this ignorance is brought to our knowledge in frightful bills of youthful mortality. The school houses are all pretty well arranged for ventilation, except two.
Teachers should see that ventilators are properly used. All report that this has been done.

Cleanliness is manifest in nearly all much taste is manifested in a number of schools, by the decoration of the room with wreaths, mottoes, etc. This is, as it should be. The school room should be made attractive, so as to lure the little ones to the spot. But while some are thus tastefully arranged, others present nothing but bare and smoked walls, deformed benches etc. These things have much to do with the formation of the child's character.

Singing is practiced in all but seven, but will be in all. It might be profitably taught in the two advanced graded schools. In the Primary school at Centre Hall we noticed a feature which we deem worthy of special notice, and commendation; the teacher leads the singing with an accompanied on a school organ, which she has furnished at her own expense.
A taste for music should be cultivated in our schools. In many of the schools the instruction is thorough, while in some it can be much improved. The pupil's success will depend not so much upon the space given over, as upon the thoroughness of what he has learned.

The attendance ranges from 60 to 94 per cent. (This latter being the attendance of the Primary school at Centre Hall.) The new house built in the Loop during the year, is a good frame structure; the seating however is not as good as it might be. Besides this, five have been furnished with necessary out-buildings during the year.
There are still seven without these, and it is hoped directors will continue the good work till all are thus furnished. Two schools only are without outline maps and these, we understand, are to be furnished during the present year. A new house is under contract at Centre Hill, to take the place of the old one. The old stone house at "Pine Stamp" is also unfit for use. The uniformity of books established a few years ago, is maintained, and we trust the people are beginning to see that it is as easy and cheap to use one kind of books as it is to use a dozen different kinds.

Nine of the teachers have had over five years' experience, and five never taught before, one holds a professional certificate. Four have attended a County Normal School, and twelve of them attended the recent Co. Institute.
Average age of teachers 28 years.

Salaries of teachers from $30 to $35 per month. We would suggest a more thorough grading of teachers' salaries, of which we have no doubt.
No downright acts of disobedience exist, but in several an unwilling hesitating compliance with the requirements of the teacher were noticed.
Nothing short of prompt obedience should be tolerated. If pupils can be inspired with feelings of self-respect, no trouble need be apprehended in regard to a violation of any just rules of conduct.

The negroes throughout the Union are preparing for a grand jubilation as, as a "Mass Grant" declares the 15th Anniversary is adopted. "When will the white men of the Union have a jubilation over their enslavement to a military despotism? It is about time, some preparation was being made."

Grant, it is thought, will not imitate the example of his humble but pious and philanthropic followers, Whites-more and Dewees, and resign. They sold paltry cadetships, but he disposed of cabinet offices, foreign embassies, and posts in the treasury, for houses and lots and bonds of the government.
The latter was a noble sort of traffic, which has earned for Grant the admiration of all the loyal, white, poor Whittemore and Dewees are sent back to their surviving and subtle obstinacy for acting out of a cadetship or two. "How inequitably are the rewards and punishments of this world dispersed. A Grant can put up a cabinet for sale, while a Whittemore is banished for selling a cadet."

Mexico is now in the enjoyment of a full-blown civil war. The insurgents are sorely pressing the government, troops, and Juarez is compelled to resort to force in order to fill the depleted ranks of his army. Throughout the republic affairs are in a state of confusion bordering on anarchy. A new President is suggested in opposition to Juarez, with the seat of government at Calientes. Secretary Seward's visit and speeches do not appear to have done the revolutionary Mexicans any good.

Mr. Whittemore's friends in South Carolina have arranged for a series of public meetings in his district, which are to be addressed by him in vindication of his conduct in the disposal of cadetships. The object is to re-arrange for his re-election to Congress, and to show that he is not unworthy of a second term.

A newspaper published in the regions of the Lakes of Memphremong and Winnesaukee, says that "the fish of Lake Hollyhunkum, Maine, are said to be superior to those of either Lake Weeeyobacook or Moosetackmeagunt. Those of Chaunhugung, among were very fine; but they all got choked to death in trying to tell where they lived."
