CENTRE HALL REPORTER.
CENTRE HALL, Pa., March 18th 1870.
Double Execution.
Peightal Murderers Perish Together.
THE LAST STATEMENT OF THE CONDEMNED.
SCENES UPON THE SCAFFOLD.
HUNTINGDON, March 9.
The morning is fine—the sun shining brightly and large crowds are already flocking in from the country—arriving by the different trains, in conveyances, etc.
The vicinity of the prison is already packed with people and hundreds are wending their way thither to witness the shocking finale of the murderers of the Peightal family.
The night trains have brought their quota of visitors, and the borough of Huntingdon is literally alive with people representing the neighboring counties. Altoona, Tyrone, Lewistown, Millin, Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Philadelphia are represented. I should judge that at least four thousand spectators are present.
THE HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS, by request of Sheriff Neely, were ordered to be closed until two o'clock p. m.
THE GALLOWES.
The gallows, which was erected directly over the spot where stood the gallows on which McConahy was executed, and is in full view of the cell windows in which the convicts were confined. The scaffold was built of substantial timber, the platform, or "drop," being about fourteen feet from the ground. It was formed of two doors hung from the outside framework and meeting in the centre, after the manner of folding doors laid horizontally. These doors were sustained in position by a prop under the centre, which being removed the doors fell downward and outward. The top beam to which the nooses were attached, stood about twenty two feet from the ground. The rope was so arranged as to permit of about twenty-eight inches fall. It differed but little from the one used at Carlisle, in the execution of Adam Titus.
The coffins, of plain pine boards, stained a brown color, were brought into the yard last evening and placed in an out-house, out of sight of the prisoners.
INTERVIEW WITH VON BODENBURG.
About seven o'clock, last evening, Miss Kerper, the lady to whom Boden-berg was engaged to be married, visited the prison and had a lengthy interview with him. During her visit she besought Boden-berg to confess the truth and clear Boden-berg of the murder. If he could not save his life, but Boden-berg replied that as Boden-berg was with him the night of the murder he would have to hang with him.
APPEARANCE OF THE PRISONERS THIS MORNING.
Bohner appeared rather unconcerned in regard to the awful fate awaiting him. He smoked a cigar with perfect nonchalance, and said he slept soundly last night, as he had drank a bottle of wine last evening, and it made him feel good. He laughed and talked alternately, displaying considerable levity.
Von Boden-berg was overcome with grief. His eyes appeared blood-shot and much swollen, from excessive weeping. Mentally, he is in deep distress.
THE CLERGYMEN attending the doomed men were Rev. Steble, of the Reformed church, Rev. Wilson, of the Methodist Episcopal, Rev. Kerr, of the Lutheran church, and Rev. Clark.
SHERIFF NEELY, shortly after twelve o'clock, mounted the steps leading to the platform, and in a respectful manner admonished the people assembled in the prison yard to observe order and decency. He said, "Let the rowdies and drunken men outside the walls create noise and disturbances, but we must carry out the intent of the law as becomes a law-abiding and Christian people."

The visitors in the prison yard numbered about four hundred, including clergymen, physicians, reporters, and a large number of deputies and assistants.
OUTSIDE ARRANGEMENTS.
Platforms were erected by private enterprise, around the outside of the prison walls, where about 400 to 500 people were accommodated at from $2 to $2.50 apiece, according to location.
CEMETERY HILL, which overlooks the jail wall, and from which a tolerably good view of the scaffold could be obtained, was crowded with people anxious to witness the execution. Doubtless many hearts on that hill sickened as the rope tightened and the two souls were ushered into eternity.
PRELIMINARIES.
At twelve minutes after twelve o'clock the manacles were removed from the prisoners.
The Sheriff and Deputy Foust, approached the prisoners and taking them by the arms proceeded to the scaffold. Bohner ascended the scaffold with a firm tread, but Boden-berg staggered considerably. Revs. Clark, Steble and Sykes ascended the scaffold. After the condemned were then pinioned Boden-berg read the following confession in the German language in a clear and distinct voice:
BODENBURG'S DYING ADDRESS.
Charley the time is now getting very short for us to live; then we will have to appear before the judgement seat of God. We will then receive our reward for the deeds done in the body, be they good or evil. You have so often promised and sworn to me that you would bring about my release; I, therefore, now, once more pray you, in the name of God, to tell the truth; if you cannot or will not save my life, at least save your own poor soul from everlasting damnation. There is still some time. You have no right to say that a man dies like a beast, or that when a man dies all is over. I know only too well that something still remains in your heart which tells you unmistakably enough that which you say to be directly contrary to the truth. Your perverted mind does not permit it. Your sins are too frightful to allow you power to tell the truth. Neither can you humble yourself before the throne of our Lord Jesus. I can assure you that you will soon regret it. So far as I am concerned you can do whatever you choose. But pray tell me what pleasure this can be to you that I be hung with you?
I have fortunately not depended much on you for I think I know you, you have no feeling for your fellow man. It is true I believed very confidently that the court would not condemn me to die, since I went with you for the sole purpose of stealing this money; nor have I taken the life of any man, in full consciousness of which also I can die. If you reflect upon this affair, how terribly you battered this woman's head with the shovel, how beseechingly she begged you to spare her life, you will perceive who will accuse you when we shall appear before the tribunal of God.
I cannot consider it just that you should be believed more than myself, since I told the truth from the first day we came here. All this appears not to have been considered before the court. All this I did not know in time or else I would have told all myself at the time I was asked whether I had anything to say. I had confidence that those who had the law in hand to whom I told these things, would cause these things to appear in the proceedings; but this did not happen, according as it appeared to me afterward. When a man cannot confide in those who are in authority, what can I do who am a prisoner. I cannot speak English—do not know the laws of this country—have no friend who could do anything in my favor, neither had I any money wherewith to make friends. I could do nothing for myself than what I did do, viz: Tell the truth, which, as I said before, could not condemn me to death, for in Germany the law is such, that whosoever does not take the life of any man cannot be condemned to death.

This also I take for justice. There is therefore now no more left than the confidence which I have in our Father which is in Heaven. It will also by this have appeared who the real murderer is. However, the world guilty has been pronounced upon me, and I will have to be executed, for I receive the answer from every one who comes here that it is now too late. To save one unjustly condemned it is now too late! This is justice! This I leave in the hands of those who rule over us, who established the powers that be. Upon the conscience of those who wield this authority may this responsibility rest.
I will not, nor is it my province to pronounce judgment on any man. I commit it all into the hands of the Lord our God. He is the great Judge. He says vengeance is mine, I will repay. In Him I will put my trust, in Him I live and die. It is true only the few profess His name, so it falls to my lot like as unto Him. Every one cried out "away with him," so it is now—no one takes mercy on me excepting one, my God. It is indeed a matter of no small account to me to take leave of the world in the best years of my life, and it may well be a matter of regret for all such as could have been any assistance to me. Many who think of me after my death will see my spirit flit before their eyes. It is true I did what I should not have done in this, that I have shared the money, because I knew nothing of the murder. Yet this cannot condemn me to death. Men may think what they please, I know that I took the life of no man, and Almighty God is my witness.
I now return my sincere thanks to each one who showed me kindness during my time of imprisonment, and to every one farewell.
To the above Bohner replied, "We have both been here and we are both guilty and deserve to die." Boden-berg replied, "Shame on you! Shame on you! You know that I killed none."
A DENIAL.
After Von Boden-berg had got through reading his manuscript, Bohner made some remarks still charging Von Boden-berg with an equal hand in the murder, when the latter replied, vehemently, "Shem dich doch; shem dich doch." ("Shame on you; shame on you.")
THE EXECUTION.
A German prayer was then offered by Rev. Sykes and an English one by Rev. Clark. The sheriff then adjusted the noose about their necks, and Boden-berg exclaimed: "O, Lord Jesus Christ I am coming now take my soul into thy Kingdom." The caps were then drawn over their heads, and as the ministers left the scaffold the sheriff gave the signal. There was a perceptible "thud," and the souls of Gottlieb Bohner and Albert Von Boden-berg were ushered into eternity.
Boden-berg died comparatively easy in eleven minutes, but Bohner struggled fearfully for fifteen minutes before death.
After hanging twenty minutes the bodies were taken down and examined by the physicians present: Dr. G. W. Thompson, of Mt. Union; Dr. J. F. Thompson, of Scottsville, Huntingdon county; Dr. Neely of Kansas; and Dr. Mitchell, of Millin county.
THE BODIES were left suspended just twenty seven minutes, then cut down and placed in their coffin.
THE DEAD BODIES were then taken charge of by Sheriff Neely. What disposition will be made of them (as there are no relatives at hand to remove them) I am of course unable to state. Rumor says they will be "subjects" for the disciples of Esculapius.
WITHIN THE WALLS of the prison the most profound order prevailed until the tragic affair was brought to a close.
"THE OUTSIDE BARBARIANS" behaved (at least some of them) in a shameful manner, creating much unnecessary noise and confusion while the clergymen were offering up prayers in behalf of the men who were about to be launched into eternity.
SEVERAL OF THE DEPUTIES of Sheriff Neely were several times obliged to threaten some of the most daring fellows who attempted to leap up and scale the prison walls after the criminals were executed.

THE MORAL EFFECT of the execution of Von Boden-berg and Bohner upon the crowd of hummers and roughts in the vicinity of the railroad depot was not altogether salutary. A fight ensued, in which a number of the participants were pretty roughly handled. The "row" was kept up until the eastward bound train arrived and parted most of the assailants. At Mill Creek station, below Huntingdon, however, a pair of dissatisfied bloods "pitched in" for a final settlement of difficulties, and a pair of bloody noses and bruised heads was the result. One of the men barely escaped having his head crushed by the starting of the train.
LAST WORDS OF GOTTLIEB BOHNER.
HUNTINGDON, MARCH 8, 1870.
Beloved in the Lord!—It is a matter of labor to collect my thoughts to say unto you my farewell. I pray all whom I may have offended, not to treasure up anger against me, but to pardon me since I am about to recall, and do not recall all, before I depart. I depart from this life in the consciousness that I am at peace with God. I therefore take this cup of bitterness with comfort. I place myself immediately before the judgement seat of God as I approach the shores of eternity, since I constantly pray and commune with Him silently. This causes me comfort and happiness here and hereafter. I speak in this manner to God and not to man. I feel myself offended in this when men undertake to teach me. I have, in Germany, myself led in prayer meeting and know but to well that a man can by himself be converted. I have myself experienced the righteousness of God since I walked the broad way and left the narrow way which leadeth unto life. Whether man will pardon me I do not know, yet I hope that God will have mercy on me at the last day of judgment.
Beloved citizens of Huntingdon, by the time you will have seen my last writing and my last words, I will likely not be any more, for the messenger of death stands at the door with his flaming sword and demands my soul. Whether I am guilty or not guilty I am not able to judge, therefore I leave it in the hands of God. He is the righteous judge. His powerful word I will soon hear, and will submit myself to his righteous punishment.
Beloved friends, that I may so call you causes me a peculiar pleasure. I cannot by word of mouth tell you, you may therefore receive it from my pen for the pain which I suffer prevents me from telling you, for I take nothing out of this world but the empty pages whereon I make known my tears and complaints. My tears flow while I am writing. My last rest upon this page. Think of me here as I will think of you in yonder happy world. I have no fears for the grave, I rather long for it, because I shall find rest from pains and troubles suffered and endured. "Whoever fears the grave is still lost in the world. The grave is my resting place, to which my body looks with joy, since here all troubles cease and leave me, whoever speaks in fear of the grave knows not its rest. The grave removes all my burdens and cares, and troubles from me." Let me therefore here rest in peace. Great God for all this I thank thee. From all the pains and terrors of sin I shall likewise here also be freed. Beautiful grave! Dark clef! Easy lap! Here I shall become fully rested; freed from suffering, trouble and misfortune. Lord into thy hands I commit my spirit. Rest here favors my body. Beloved all in Huntingdon, I say once more to you all my farewell, with the hope, however, to meet each other in the region beyond, where pain and tears and troubles shall be no more, where God will wipe away all tears from our eyes, where we shall all bloom in everlasting spring; I will beseech God in your behalf, will consecrate to you my last sigh.
During my last thoughts for you death will translate me into the better life. Let me here conclude. My hand trembles; fear beclouds my eyes. To certify to the truth of this I seal it with my death and attest it with my own signature. Very respectfully,
GOTTLIEB VON BOHNER.

V Woman and Her Child all Night in the Snow.
In the great snow storm of the 15th ult., says the Lewistown, Me. Journal, Mrs. Nathaniel Moody left Lewistown with a horse and pang for her home in Auburn, on the westerly side of Taylor Pond. She had in her arms a child two years old. On reaching the pond she attempted to drive across to shorten the distance, but the track was short and after driving around in a circle for an hour or more, it being dark and cold, she decided to stay where she was and made the best of the situation. Wrapping the child up in two buffalo robes, which she fortunately had, she unharnessed the horse and turned him loose. She then tipped the pang up and made a temporary shelter beneath it, and wrapping the drapery of her couch about her, she laid down for the night. She made a pillow of her arm for the child, and with one robe beneath them and one above them, and the sheets of snow over and under all, they entered on a long, cold and desolate winter night. The snow drifted against the pang, and rendered her novel resting place warmer. Though her sleep was not troubled with dreams, Mrs. Moody woke the next morning to find herself safe, and the babe sleeping sweetly on the fleecy snow. A part of her arm had become exposed and had frozen, otherwise she was warm. The horse appeared at the homestead across the pond in the morning, and his presence revealed the trouble. Search was immediately made, and Mrs. Moody and her child were soon rescued.
FROM CHICAGO. At least two of the great railroads leading to Chicago will on the first of the month announce the payment of specie change at all their offices.
One firm, liquor dealers, paid out five hundred dollars in silver on Saturday, the day they resumed specie payment. Failing to get a supply here they have sent to Canada for $5,000 in coin, and propose to pay specie in change permanently.
On Saturday night a burglar was discovered attempting to break into a house. He was secured, after a desperate resistance and lodged in jail. On Sunday night he attempted to burn himself out, and succeeded in setting the bedding on fire. He was burned to death.
Great Fenian Excitement in New York.
New York, March 9.—There is great activity among the Fenians here and an early movement on Canada is spoken of. The organization is now in possession of fifty thousand breech loaders. They state that they can put two hundred thousand men in the field at a week's notice.
An ice merchant in Greenwich Con., who had been watching his pond all winter with almost prayerful interest in hopes of a freeze, visited it recently after a sharp, cold night, stepped on the ice, and finding that it would bear him, exclaimed: "I thank God!" Going still further on the pond, he exclaimed more fervently, "Thank God!" But on venturing a trifle further, and going through up to his neck, he ejaculated, louder and more heartier than ever, "D—n the ice!"

An Astounding Crime in Spain.
The Gaulois gives an account of a horrible and mysterious affair in Spain, which it first heard by telegraph, and which it says it would not believe had not the details (yet incomplete) been confirmed by a letter from its own correspondent, M. Miranda. The story is that on February 17, a pand of people (a number not stated), broke into a house at Aloira, a little village near Valencia, at three in the morning. They got in by making a hole in the roof. The name of the owner of this house was M. Baluda. He was in bed with his wife. The invaders pulled them out of bed and put gags in their mouths. They then went to the rooms where six children were sleeping. These children they bound with cords, and then, in sight of their parents, they tore out their eyes and tongues. Afterwards they cut off the feet of Mr. Baluda and his eldest son, named Vincent, but purposely left the navel near the heel unsevered, and then they hung them up head downward. After these achievements they ransacked the farder, made a good breakfast, jeering at their victims all the time, and left the house at daybreak. Two of the villains have been arrested. One named Ferdinand Baluda is a near relation of the family. He went by the alias of Cabot. The other man in custody is named Vincent Morea, alias Tortet. The number of the gang is not stated. They did not rob the house, and therefore it is supposed that they were impelled to execute a vandetta a la Cree. Nothing more is yet known of this astonishing crime.

AN INFERNAL OUTRAGE.—The Fulton Democrat of the 3d inst. publishes the following: "On Wednesday week a young German, who has been in the county for some time past selling medicines, stopped at the home of Obad Mallet, in Belfast township, and offered his medicines for sale. During his stay he took an egg out of his valise and after breaking it poured some kind of a drug into the shell which he set on fire. He then got Mr. Mallet, his wife and a little boy to inhale the smoke of the burning drug, which rendered them insensible. While in this state the young scoundrel committed a Rape on the body of Mrs. Mallet. Noticing that Mr. M. was beginning to become sensible, he administered another dose to him. The young man was on Friday last brought to this place by Constable Smith assisted by John J. Moreton and Ephraim Lake from whom we obtained the above particulars of the case, and committed to jail to await his trial."

The sale of medical diplomas is the raging scandal in Philadelphia. The Evening Star says: "The sale of medical diplomas, like that of West Point cadetship, is likely to bring the parties implicated in these most respectable transactions into trouble, and it is to be hoped that such will be the case."
Baltimore, March 8.—At 1 o'clock, this morning a man named A. Lewis, who was intoxicated, shot and killed his son, aged seven years. The officers on entering the room found Lewis speechless drunk on the floor.

"No."
"Why not?"
"Because women can't turn summer sets."
AUDITORS MEETING.
Notice is hereby given that the Auditors of Potter township will meet at the office of the Auditor, Centre Hall, on the 25th inst. for the purpose of auditing accounts of township officers, when all interested will be present. IL DASLER, Clerk.
DISSOLUTION.—Notice is hereby given that the partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned in mercantile business at Centre Hall, under the firm of Wasson & Co., was dissolved on the 24th inst. 1870, mutually dissolved. The books of the firm will be found at the old stand, in the hands of J. B. Solt, for settlement, where all persons interested are requested to call, without delay, settling accounts. G. WASSON, J. B. SOLT.

NOTICE.—The old customers of the above store, as well as the community in general, are hereby respectfully notified, that the business in the above store will be carried on in all its branches, heretofore. Thankful for past favors, solicits a share of the public patronage. A full assortment of goods always on hand and offered as cheap as elsewhere. J. B. SOLT.

London, March 8.—Sailing vessels arriving, report heavy easterly gales in the Atlantic, and vast fields of ice are floating southward much earlier than usual.
About six weeks ago, Mary Kern, aged thirteen years, was attacked, in Philadelphia, by ruffians, who attempted to steal her pocketbook, but falling in this, cut off her hair with a razor. She became sick from fright, and died on Friday from the effects. No arrests were made.
Henry Heimerle, of Hudson, New York, committed suicide the other day, on the eve of his wedding, leaving a note saying, "I don't want to make that girl unhappy."

London, March 9.—The German and Austrian Bishops have decided to oppose the promulgation of infallibility and all new dogmas. It is generally hoped that the Pope will not precipitate a collision with European powers.
