CENTRE HALL, PA., APRIL 29th 1870.

The New Testament Woman. BY REV. J. GUERNSEY.

In the home, and all that belongs to it, she recognizes woman's appointed place, her largest power, her sweetest attraction, her noblest virtues, and her best possibilities of Christian and womanly development. She is not so far "advanced" in her thinking as not to believe that it is well "that every man have his own wife, and every woman her own husband." She does not claim a juster appreciation of woman's place in the economy of life, or a higher and truer inspiration, than were his who said-"I will that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, therefore, of those who speak slightingly of marriage as offering a position of degrading dependence, or of the care of children and the duties of the household as too insignificant, and having too much drudgery in them to be worthy of their powers. She has more and mother, and is the worthy mistress of a Christian home, is quite as likely to lead a life fruitful in blessed and useful ministries, and to receive from her Lord the plaudit, "Well done, good
