Little Goldenhair.

BY A. S. STAMDART.

Goldenhair climbed upon grandpapa' knee: Dear little Goldenhair, tired was she, All the day busy as busy could be.

Up in the morning as soon as 'twas light, Out with the birds and butterflies bright. Tripping about 'till the coming of night. Grandpapa toyed with the curls on he head, "What has my darling been doing?" he said, "Since she arose with the sun from her bed.

"Pity much," answered the sweet little

Frenchmen: There are in the life of a irresistibly, rises above all other interests, double life, a phenomenon which is pour applies itself with the single purpose said to be universal in all cases of exand applies itself with the single purpose of directing the destinies of the nation. One alted somnambulism. of those decisive hours has now arrived for France. Prussia, to whom we have given evidence during and since the war of 1868 of the most conciliatory disposition, has held our good will of no account, and has returned our forbearance by encroachments. She has aroused distrust in all quarters, necessitating exaggerated ar maments, and has made of Europe a camp where reign disquiet and fear of the morrow. A final incident has disclosed the instability of the international understanding, and shown the gravity of the situation. In the presence of her new pretensions Prussia was made to understand our claims. They were evaded and followed with contemptuous treatment. Our country mani fested profound displeasure at this action, and quickly a war cry resounded from one end of France to the other.

There remains for us nothing but to conthe great Germanic nationality shall dispose freely of their destinies. As for us, we demand the establishment of a state of nations are forced to employ their resources in arming against each other.

Frenchmen; I got to place myself at the head of that gallent army, which is animated by love of country and devotion to duty. That army knows its worth, for it has seen for. victory follow its footsteps in the four quarters of the globe I take with me my son. Despite his tender years he knows the duty his name imposes upon him, and he is proud to bear his part in the dangers of those who fight for their country. May God bless our efforts. A great people defending a just cause is invincible. NAPOLEON.

AN OIL PRINCE HAULING COAL .- A Rouseville (Pa.) correspondent of the Pittsburg commercial says:

"Johnny Steele," the farmer-boy, oil prince, millionaire, but now teamster, is one of the celebrities of this town. As a selfmade man he is as striking an example | child. as can be found anywhere. Five or six 7. Do not wreak your own bad temper, brief years ago it was estimated that he was or visit your own feelings of fatigue and worth between $2,000,000 an $3,000,000; trouble on children, by being severe with but to day he is reduced to the necessity of them, or by saying "You shan't have it," earning an honest living by hauling coal or "I won't give it to you," when there is long the streets of Rouseville, and is doubtess a greater blessing to the community yourself tired, or in trouble, or out o than in the days of his prosperity. His sorts. case furnishes as apt an illustration of the truth of the old adage, that "riches take unto themselves wings" as can be desired; it down," etc., unless you really mean that but, unfortunately, whisky and fast life they should be obeyed, and the fewer orders furnished the wings. It is a marked fact | you give the better. that the majo ity of the old residents who became all of a sudden immensely wealthy, be severe and unkind, when a child tumare to-day sunk in poverty almost as deeply | bles down or hurts itself, as before they woke up and discovered that they were the possessors of vast wealth.

LEMONADE AND FEVERS .- A cotemporary says that in most cases of fevers we have no doubt that the attack might have like a child; to enter into its griefs and joys, term as a preventive of these diseases.

By the aid of a microscope it is seen hat blood consists of minute round bodies floating in an opaline liquid; Merchant and these are termed corpuscles. They are so very small that one cubic inch of blood contains contains no less than eight hundred million corpuscles .-Blood is rather heavier than water, as is seen when a drop is let fall into the transparent liquid; it falls through it. In about fifteen minutes after blood is drawn from the body it ceases to be fluid, and becomes a gelatinous mass. After standing for about twenty four hours it separates into two distinct parts-one a watery fluid, which is called serum; the other, a sol idified mass, coagulum. The red color of blood is due to a substance called hematine, which exists in the corpuscles. The coagulum consists in the main of a body called fibrin-flesh pro ducer-masked by the color of the hematine. This fibrin differs but little from the nature of the white of an egg. The blood fulfulls every office n the body by restoring and building it up. Certain matters are eliminated rom the blood to produce hair, nails, kin, fat, muscle, bone, brain, etc. It s therefore obvious that the blood must be of a complex nature. As a ingle fluid it contains more known elements than any other known natural hody; among others may be mentioned phosphorous, lime, magnesia, iron, sulpher, soda, chlorine, potass, etc. In its natural condition it contains fat and sugar. The average comevery thousand parts from a male, it contains 780 of water; from a female,

The Archbishop of Bordeaux thus describes a case of somnambulism in a young priest: He was in the habit of writing sermons when asleep, and although a card was placed between his eyes and the note book, he continued to write vigorously. After he had written a page requiring corrections, a piece of blank paper of the exact size was substituted for his own manuscript, and on that he made the corrections in the precise situation which they would have occupied on the original page. A very as onishing part of this is that which relates to his writing music in his sleeping state, which it is said, he did with perfect precision. He asked for certain things, and saw and heard such things, but only such things as bore directly upon the subject of his thought. He detected the The Holds Prussia Responsible for deceit when water was given to him in the War—France Determind to the place of wine, which he asked for.
