Carpet bagging has paid well in the Southern states. The Charleston, South Carolina, News says that Governor Scott, when he first went to that State, paid taxes only on a horse and chaise. As Governer of the State he has for two years received a salary of thirty five hundred dollars per year, and now, according to his own admission, has property to the value of one hundred and thirty thousand dollars! And the worst of it is, that his most intimate friends cannot explain how he honestly acquired it. A similar story might be teld of the doughty Governor Bullock, of Georgia, whose railroad speculations add a fit chapter to the history of his performances at Washington during the past winter. When these facts are considered, the desperate fight made by Holden, Scott, Bullock and others to retain power in the South is no wonder or mystery.

A cotemporary says that Jim Fisk drove the President to the verge of madness by a series of petty persecutions at Long Branch. Mr. Fisk drove his six in hand furiously past His Excellency on the beach, filling the Presidential heart with chagrin, and the Presidential eyes with dust. And the Prince is said to have been in the habit of holding his nose, as if he smelled something when His Excellency sauntered by. This is damnable. It is said that the head of the Nation cannot take a quiet promenade without being treated as a night cart by a Yankee pedler; but really we don't see what we are going to do about it. Mr. Fiske's nose is his owe, and can anbody blame him for holding his own nose?-Lancaster Intelligencer.
