April 11. 71. STARLIGHT. Letter from Missouri.

MARYVILLE, Mo., APRIL 24TH, 1871. Marville, Mo., April 24th, 1871.

Dear Editor—I am constantly receiving letters from persons in Centre county, who seem to be very anxious to know all about the west but as it would take all my time in replying to their many inquiries individually, I will address them collectively through the columns of the Reporter if allowed, if not, consign the letter to the waste basket where all dead matter goes. Now, in the first place, I shall not mention names out of respect for the green uns, but shall simply designate characters whereby each one will understand his piece. I will first notice, John's letter who says that he would some west, only he is afraid of the Indians; that he hears of them killing people every day and wants to know of me if it is so; also how they look and how large they are, and whether the people all go armed here.

and whether the people all go armed here. Now, John, I tell you it takes a mait with a mighty good nerve to look at an Indian the first time without fainting; for, oh heavens, what a monster in human form, why he has awful ears like those big tobacco leaves that used to grow back of your gip pen, and teeth like old fashioned harrow teeth, eves like the head light of an engine and the nose, as a general thing, is about the size of yours (that is as near as I remember) and they sometimes attain the enormous hight of pine tree; and as to killing people, good heavens, I will not attempt to describe the scene, as it would stop imigration into our country from the east entirely, it is absurd to think that people would gounarmed here—every person goes armed to the teeth, carrying no less than two sixteen pound howitzers in their vest pocket besides one huge barlow knife and three or four tooth picks. Now then you can form your own conclusions about coming west. Next in order comes Sam's letter, who says that he dont believe a word about the soil being from two to five feet in cepth and so rich as some say, and further adds that knewing me to be a reliable sort of a fellow he wants me to tol! kim how every thing grows, such as grain and vegetables, which I will proceed to do as neurately as possible, as far as my knowledge of farming goes. I will first speak of our grain and say that our farmers lose thousands of bushels every year from the want of room to stack it—the field where it grows in will not begin to hold it all; farmers must always haul part of it off to some other field to stack it, and a-for potatoes, why jewhilikens, there is no end to them and none of your small potatoes either; tin buckets and half bushels are no where in comparison. To prove the adaptability of our soil to vogetables, I will relate an incident which came near proving fatal to myself.

I went out one day for the purpose of planting cucumber seed, and happening in a good spot, I soon had my seeds covered with mother earth and stepped awa
