ARRIVAL OF JUDGE DOUGLAS. Hotel, where he will be happy to meet his friends to-day. It is expected he will address his friends from the balcony of the St. Charles this evening, prior to leaving on the western train for Columbus.

HON. STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS. The passing political history of the country—the obvious necessity that the National Democracy in the approaching Presidential contest, should select for their leader a statesman of prominence, experience, ability and honesty, have fixed the popular mind upon Stephen A. Douglas, as being in a pre-eminent degree one of the bold, progressive, energetic and intellectual men of the times. In him we have a brilliant specimen of the free spirit of the country and the age-a statesman, honest, experienced, fearless in the right, and capable for any emergency which may arise in the administration of the affairs of a Republican government. In he is a true examplar of a National American man. No country brings forth so many aid. great men as our own, for here we have no privileged class. It is our boast that the highest positions of power and honor, which can exist under our constitution and government are open to all. Worth, talent, energy, genius, brain and soul, are the standards of American greatness. The brilliant oraeye rests upon his name as the one whose great popularity and proud position in the party, is more like than any other to attract, as with magnetic influence, the masses of the people of the country to the Democratic standard in 1860. In this ment of the prospects of Mr. Douglas for the Presidency in 1860 over all others who are named, it is but fair and proper that we should give our reasons for so doing, and we regard we see Mr. Douglas; in this regard we shall henceforth speak of him. He is our first choice as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination by the ed up on the ground of availability only, and presented to the people on the ground of a negative popularity. He is an experienced and tried statesman and a man whose services have been rendered to the whole counthe 23d of February, his letter announcing the conditions on which he would accept the nomination of the Charleston Convention, his slave trade letter, and more recently, his carfully considered and admirably written essay in Harper's Magazine, are amply sufficient to let the people know what he means to say and what he means to deny, upon the absorbing topics connected with the rights of the people under the constitution of the country. We shall publish his essay from Harper's Magazine, and it is not necessary for us now to enter into the details of his political creed. Suffice it to say that no principle which he promulgates-no doctrine which he enunciates-no argument which he uses -can be denied or refuted by any Democratic mind. On his platform, the Democracy in 1860 must stand or fall.

In heart, and brain, and effective power of action, in perseverence and decision, and administrative ability, his past history proves him to be the most fitting man named for the high office of National Chief Magistrate. His dignified and courteous bearing as a man, his fine elecution, his magnificent voice, his eagle eye, his trow, massive, like that of the God-like Daniel, are qualities which, of themselves, bespeak the great power of the man.
