MONDAY MORNING:.....JAN. 16.

☞ ALLEGHENY COUNTY DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE OF CORRESPONDENCE.
St. Charles Hotel, January 7th, 1860.

Committee met pursuant to the call of the Chairman.
D. D. Bruce, President in the Chair.
On motion of Dr. Alex. Black, it was

Resolved, That the Democratic of the County be requested to meet at their usual places of holding primary meetings, on SATURDAY, JANUARY 21st, to elect two delegates to represent them in a County Convention, to meet at the Court House, on WEDNESDAY, 25th inst., at 11 o'clock, A. M., for the purpose of electing delegates to represent said county in the State Convention, which is to assemble at Reading, on the 29th day of February next. The meetings in the townships will be held between the hours of 5 and 8 o'clock, and in the cities and boroughs between 6 and 7 o'clock, P. M.

By order of Committee,
DAVID D. BRUCE, Chairman.
John H. Phillips, Secretary. ja9

THE COUNTY CONVENTION.

On Saturday of this week, the 21st inst. the primary meetings of the Democratic party, will be held to select delegates to a County Convention, to assemble at the Court House on Wednesday. In a political point of view this Convention will be a most important one. The chief duty which it has to perform is to select seven delegates to represent the county in the State Convention, which is to be held at Reading, on the 29th of February. This Convention will have the power to express the preferences of the Democracy of Pennsylvania in regard to the selection of a Presidential candidate in 1860.

The Democracy of Allegheny county have a deep interest in this question. It may be that their influence can decide the political complexion of the State next year. Let, then, the Democratic voters of every district in the county take a personal interest in this matter, and see to it that men are sent to the County Convention who will fairly represent their wishes on the great political questions of the day.

The nomination of a candidate for Governor, is a most important question to the Democracy of Pennsylvania at the present crisis. We must have the best man to be found in our party to lead us in the contest of 1860. It is for the people themselves to indicate, through their delegates what manner of man they desire.

Let the people, by attending the primary meetings, start things right and all will go well.

THE LAWRENCE CALAMITY.

All the terrible accidents by flood, fire and railroads, pale before the terrible catastrophe at Lawrence. It was a perfect holocaust of human life. Thus far the investigations of the Coronor tend to throw the blame upon the contractor who built the mills. The newspapers are filled with graphic accounts of the calamity given by those who escaped, and thrilling inciden's recorded by eye-witnesses to the heart-rending scene.

In most of the large Eastern cities subscriptions have been started for the purpose of furnishing aid to the sufferers. This is a praiseworthy act, and one in which Pittsburgh should promptly and cheerfully participate. When the hand of Providence moved our own city, and a large portion of it was devastated by fire in 1845, the generous-hearted people of all the principal cities and towns of the country, no matter how distant from the scene of suffering, gave us their sympathy and lent us their aid. Pittsburgh owes a debt to the charities of the world which she has never yet repaid. Her wealthy citizens, now, many of whom were glad recipients of the bounty of their fellow-citizens in 1845, have here presented to them an opportunity to lend their aid in the cause of suffering humanity. Let Pittsburgh contribute to aid the sufferers at Lawrence! Let all have an opportunity to give according to their means. But especially let those who owe a portion of their present prosperity to the bounty of the generous donors of 1845, give with a free and liberal hand. We suggest that a public meeting be called for the purpose of raising funds to aid the sufferers by the recent frightful calamity at Lawrence, Mass.

—Since the above was in type we have received a call for a public meeting, to take action to aid the Lawrence sufferers. It may be found in our local columns.

KENTUCKY STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic State Convention which met last week, adopted a platform of principles on the slavery question, hostile to popular sovereignty, and in favor of Congressional intervention. No candidate who runs for the Presidency on such a platform could begin to carry a single free State. In the North we look upon the doctrine of Congressional intervention as an out and out plank in the Republican platform. The Cincinnati platform—the doctrine that the people of each State and territory should manage their own affairs in their own way—is the broad national ground upon which the battle must be fought.

MR. DOUGLAS IN THE SOUTH.

Among the Democracy of the South, the opinion is rapidly gaining ground, that, with Mr. Douglas as the standard-bearer of the national party of the country, their success will be more certain than with any other man.—He has the strength and the talent to take the party through the coming contest victorious. A perceptible change in his favor is perceived in all quarters, and the recent unqualified expressions of the Democracy of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois in his favor will add to the number of his friends everywhere.

Comedians in a Tragical Condition.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence had a narrow escape from drowning, last week, at Louisville, Kentucky. They were visiting at the estate of a friend, and went upon a pond to skate, with a party of ladies and gentlemen. Mrs. Florence skated into an air-hole, and Mr. F. and another gentleman broke through the ice in attempting her rescue. An alarm was given, and a negro belonging to the family was chiefly instrumental in saving the trio, who were threatened with a cold and wet grave. Mrs. F. came nearest a fatal issue, but was restored by the kind attentions of her friends. The adventure might answer for the foundation of a play, in which an Irishman, a Yankee girl and a negro may figure.

The Kentucky Delegates.

The following is a list of the delegates from Kentucky to the Charleston Convention. They are instructed for Mr. Guthrie as their first choice for President:

Delegates at Large.—R. K. Williams, G. A. Caldwell, John C. Mason, D. P. White.

District Delegates—1st, William Bradley; G. H. Morrow; 2d, Lafayette Green, S. B. Greenfield; 3d, Geo. T. Wood, John A. Finn; 4th, S. B. Field, John Kenrick; 5th, Ben. Spalding, Wm. Reid; 6th, John Dishman, Colbert Cecil, 7th, J. F. Speed, S. E. Debaven; 8th, R. M. Johnson, S. B. Beck; 9th, Joseph J. Young, Robert H. McKee; 10th, H. D. Helm, R. P. Butler.

Revolutionary Soldiers.

There are now about two hundred and seven revolutionary soldiers living, whose names are on the pension list. They have all sunk to their graves but this small band. In a very few years, not a human being who participated in the war of 1776 will be left standing upon the shore of time.

☞ To be worthy of office now-a-days, one must be entirely unworthy of anything else.

"WHAT THE OLD YEAR SAID."

We publish this morning, from the Boston Courier, an amusingly philosophic article, which is supposed to have been what the old year said to the people of the New England Metropolis. It is worth reading, and, as a satire, may be as stimulating in Pittsburgh as in Boston:

Eighteen hundred and Fifty Nine lingered, on Saturday night, in the high belfry of the church in Hanover street, for, being a wily old fellow, who has seen the world, he knew that the clock there, like many other things that go "on tick," was sure to be behind time, and he would thus gain five minutes before he stepped into the past. As he looked out over the snow-beleaguered town he spoke.

And this was what he said:

"I'm not sorry to leave you, for I've had a hard time with you. I came once a year fresh and merry chimed many of you asleep in warm beds, and others trying to sleep in beds not so warm. Even to you with no beds at all. By many this event was hailed with boisterous glee; for the most probably been of a brewer's to which you drank my health. You greeted me loudly, and then by day-light began to growl about the weather I brought; some of you have growled about the weather on each of my three hundred and sixty-five days. There was no such thing as suiting you; and, to tell the truth, I never cared much whether you were suited or not. When I first came I had a good stock of faith in human nature, was disposed to deal very gently with your faults and to make much of your excellencies. But you abused me from the beginning to the end, and now I don't wonder that you are glad to turn your back on one you have so much injured. What a quantity of humbug I have seen, to be sure! Why, on the first day of my course it was rampant. Everybody called out, one to the other, 'Wish you a happy New Year,' and then went directly to work to render happiness impossible for all parties. And it did! And the whole alphabet wrapped themselves in a thick mantle of selfishness, became social hedgehogs, with a head rarely visible and never attractive.

"I could not help laughing children I was, when on the 'New Year's Day,' I saw the small parties of men young men making calls—not because they liked to do so, not because they enjoyed the business, nor because they had anything to say, nor because they really wanted to see anybody, but because the nice young men of New York fellowship the ancient custom modernized—on that day, and it was thought to be the thing. That in the metropolis was a natural and exceedingly characteristic—graceful early in the day, I mean—and in which a certain measure of real and hilarious enjoyment was to be found, because here to you a solemn performance, dull, even if original and well done, is tasteless as an imitation.

"Then, however, Audubon asked for his thousand dollars, but he was cut off with one excuse after another. 'Ah, Mr Audubon,' would the owner of millions observe, 'you come at a bad time; money is very scarce; I have nothing in hand. I have invested all my funds. At length, the sixth time, Audubon called upon Astor for his thousand dollars. As he was ushered into his presence he found Wm. Astor at the desk, conversing with the father. No sooner did the rich man see the man of art, than he began, 'Ah, Mr. Audubon, so you have come again after your money. Hard times, Mr Audubon, money very scarce.' But just then entering a servant inquiring book from him, and, in a few minutes, he was busily and cheerfully engaged in conversation with him, touching on the ordinary topics of the day, from time to time on the money market, but the moment a call touch upon money, each man of you puts on his pontifical robes and bows down. 'Tis well. Cultivate this feeling, and then you will scrape together wealth, and when you die you will leave it all behind you and go somewhere else.

"My time is almost out. I hear the steps of my successor. Shortly you will be cleaning your glasses, dancing on my grave, and hailing the newly born. I wish him joy of you. And to-morrow morning you will make good resolutions. O, yes! If they be only kept, all the traders will do a cash business next year. Well I'm tired of you. And yet there's some good among you; some true hearts, some——

"Just then the clock awoke to a sense of duty and struck. It was a clumsy executioner, and took twelve blows to slay the old year. He died like a man who has too long put off making his will, and the legacy of his good word was lost. It is pleasant to think, though, that he would have said something kind had there been time.

Characteristic Anecdote of John Jacob Astor.

The following amusing anecdote is told of John Jacob Astor, in the double character of a patron of literature and parsimonious moneyholder, which appears to be exceedingly characteristic:

Among the subscribers to Audubon's magnificent work on ornithology, the subscription price of which was $1,000 a copy, appeared the name of John Jacob Astor. During the progress of the work the procurement of which was great, the enthusiastic Mr Audubon of course exceedingly anxious for the payment of his subscribers for payment. It so happened that Mr. Astor, (probably that he ought not be troubled about small matters,) was not applied to before the delivery of all the letter press and plates, which, however, Audubon asked for his thousand dollars, but he was cut off with one excuse after another. 'Ah, Mr Audubon,' would the owner of millions observe, 'you come at a bad time; money is very scarce; I have nothing in hand. I have invested all my funds. At length, the sixth time, Audubon called upon Astor for his thousand dollars. As he was ushered into his presence he found Wm. Astor at the desk, conversing with the father. No sooner did the rich man see the man of art, than he began, 'Ah, Mr. Audubon, so you have come again after your money. Hard times, Mr Audubon, money very scarce.' But just then entering a servant inquiring book from him, and, in a few minutes, he was busily and cheerfully engaged in conversation with him, touching on the ordinary topics of the day, from time to time on the money market, but the moment a call touch upon money, each man of you puts on his pontifical robes and bows down. 'Tis well. Cultivate this feeling, and then you will scrape together wealth, and when you die you will leave it all behind you and go somewhere else.

"My time is almost out. I hear the steps of my successor. Shortly you will be cleaning your glasses, dancing on my grave, and hailing the newly born. I wish him joy of you. And to-morrow morning you will make good resolutions. O, yes! If they be only kept, all the traders will do a cash business next year. Well I'm tired of you. And yet there's some good among you; some true hearts, some——

Just then the clock awoke to a sense of duty and struck. It was a clumsy executioner, and took twelve blows to slay the old year. He died like a man who has too long put off making his will, and the legacy of his good word was lost. It is pleasant to think, though, that he would have said something kind had there been time.

Fernando Wood at Charleston.

It is stated that Mayor Wood, of New York, will go to Charleston to attend the Democratic National Convention, with a large body of partisans, in addition to his delegates, in a special steamer provided by George Law.

The Mexican Treaty and what the Mexicans think of it.

The Reactionary party in Mexico are furious over the new treaty between Mexico and the United States. The Liberals are highly pleased with it. They say the United States will receive certain commercial advantages in return for others conferred upon Mexico which will prove valuable to the country. The Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Miramon government, protests that the Juarez government had no right, under the Constitution of 1857, to act with any portion of the Mexican territory, nor were they vested with the power and right to make treaties with foreign nations. The most curious and extraordinary surmises are made, some pretending that troops will be sent to Vera Cruz shortly, for the purpose of invading the country; others, that the government of the United States will secure the ports to the Liberal cause, thus permitting Juarez to employ all his resources for the conquest of the interior; while others, again, pretend that the United States furnish nothing but money, and very little of that. The government organ publishes an article in which open war, war to the knife, is declared to the unfortunate Yankees. It finishes with these words: "We shall then have war with the United States, for when the sword of Brennus is thrown into the scales there is no judge but the battle-field."

Changes in Senate Committees.

At that gentleman's request, Mr. Hammond has been relieved from service upon the Senate's Committee on Finance, to which Mr. Toombs has been assigned in his stead; and, at his own request, Mr. Toombs has been relieved from the Chairmanship of the Committee on Revolutionary Pensions, to which Mr. Hammond has been assigned by the Chair. Mr. Fessenden, at his own request, was, not long since, relieved from service on the Special Committe on the Houmas land grant question or subject, and Mr. Foster was appointed to fill the vacancy upon it thus made. Subsequently Mr. Foster requested to be excused from service upon it, and his request having been granted, it was voted by the Senate that that Committee shall hereafter consist of four, instead of five members.

Strength and Health Restored.

Mr. John Davidson, living ten miles above Pittsburgh, on the Pennsylvania Canal, says—"When I commenced taking Brehatec's Holland Bitters, I could hardly walk—now I enjoy excellent health."

HEADACHE AND DEBILITY.

Mr. Silas J. Lascomb, of Birmingham, says:—"I have found in Brehatec's Holland Bitters a remedy for headache and debility. My wife has also used it with the greatest benefit."

Mr. A. S. Nicholson, of Pittsburgh, also remarks that he has experienced much relief from its use for the headache.

Read Ourselves.—The Genuine highly Concentrated Brehatec's Holland Bitters is put up in half pint bottles only, and retailed at one dollar per bottle. The great demand for this truly celebrated Medicine has induced many imitations, which the public should guard against purchasing. Beware of imposition!
