Mr. Stanton said there was much misappre-Mr. Stanton said there was much misapprehension as to this bill. It was erroneously supposed that it was to raise an army to march into the secoding States to subjugate them.—
He called attention to the acts which the bill proposed to amend, to show the necessity for he present legislation. The law of 1795 proides for calling out the militia for the supression of an insurrection in any State against is authority of the United States. The second section provides for calling out the militia n his judgment the laws covered cases of insurrection against the authority of the United States, but he found that the Ex-Attorney General entertained a different opinion, and that it only authorized the President to call out the militia to aid the officers of the Court in the execution of a process to overcome com-binations against the execution of some particular law, and did not authorize the calling out of the militia to put down a general insurrec tion: but to remove and avoid this ambiguity, the Committee on Military Affairs had nied it to be their duty to extend the law not to any specific case, but whenever there is re-sistance to the authority of the United States. There was much excitement in the House several gentlemen regarding Mr. Stanton's bill as a declaration of war.

Mr. Bocock moved to law the bill on the table, which was disagreed to by a vote of 58 Before further action the morning hour expired, and the consideration of the report of the Committee of Thirty-three was resumed. Mr. Corwin, of Ohio, proposed that the consideration of the raport of the Committee
