The hall was most tastefully decorated.

The walls were embellished, at every available point, with oil paintings and fine engravings, selected with a due regard to the occasion and very appropriate. Over the entrance was suspended a large American mented with wreaths of evergreen. But the stage exhibited more care in its decoration than any other part of the room. From the mouth of the American eagle, in the center, was sus-pended, by a ribbon, a fine picture of Wash-ington, handsomely framed, with long strands of evergreen extending from it to a point above the entrance to the side rooms on either side terminating in a wreath, encircling, on the right, a picture of the gallant Anderson, and on the left, a view of his stronghold, Fort Sumpter. At each corner of the stage was a pile of destructive looking flag near each, several smaller flags at intervals, table for reporters, covered with an Americall that portion of the county. can flug. On the floor, around the stage, muskets were stacked. The door at the rear of the stage, in the centre, was concealed by a thick et of evergreen, and the floor covered with sawdust, to drown "the tramp of many feet." The guests did not assemble early, but at ten o'clock the hallpresented a picturesque appearance. Soldiers in brilliant uniform, and ludies in gast descriptions.

larity with our citizens. We come now to the most interesting part of the entertainment—the banquet. It was of the envertainment—the banquet. It was not until half past ten that the supper march was struck up, when the company, led off by Brig. Gen. Negley, fell in by twos, took the circle of the room, and then seated themselves circle of the toom, and then seated themselves at the tatle. Two of the long tables were completely is led, and the third partially. It is estimated that not less than four hundred persons partook of the banquet.

The supper itsel, was excellent, being served up by Col. J. Fricke, who almost excelled himself in its preparation. The table was covered with all the delicacies and relishes of the season, fish, flesh, fowl and , tame, while the mis nor and side dishes, tes, co. Tee, soups, desserts, tc., were not forgotten. The company seated at table, a half hour was spent quietly, the only sound, being the clanking of dishes and table cutlery and an occasional voice giving some order to the ubiquitous waiters. This was an important feature of the evening.

Supper discussed, the waiters were for a time busied in removing the dishes from the table. while the company seemed to look forward t the dancing which the clearing away of the bles indicated was to follow. The hall being cleared, the assemblage was called to order by T. J. Bigham, Eiq., and an organization effected as follows:
