And here we think the Street Commissions of a deserve censure, in not enforcing the ordinances against these companies, who have sentered into a solemn contract with the city, by which, as part of the consideration for being permitted to use the streets, they agreed to keep the thoroughtares over which they pass clean. We need scarcely say that these contracts are daily violated, more especially by the East Liberty Company, who keep Pourth street, Wylie street, Centre and Pennsylvania Avenues in a terrible condition, such as would, in the hot season, soon breed pestilence. Now, as there is a penalty prescribed for the violation of these contracts and the companies can be obliged to keep the streets in passable condition, without expense to the city, it is clearly the duty of the Street Commissioners.

Another rerious evil is the habit so many storekeepers have of leaving boxes, empty and full, upon the sidewalk. We have known cases where a few empty boxes and barrels were placed upon the pavement, as an advertisement, as regularly as the store was opened in the morning. Yet this is a direct violation of the laws of the city and people who know that fact will persist in effending, aware that the chances against the penalty being enforced greaten to one. Name the last Congress met the Confederacy had been dismembered. At an early period of the late session he, with others, had made strenuous efforts in order to consummate a satisfactory adjustment. Unhappily, all these efforts have failed. He thought he foresaw, soon after Congress met, that they would all fail, and accordingly, more than two months ago, he wrote to the Governor of Kentucky to that effect. No man regretted this failure of Congress having adjourned, he should regret if this bedy separated without giving their opinion or advice in order to allay the apprehension in the public mind. Then the immediate question was one of peace or war. Public opinion seemed to be divided as to the meaning of the inaugural. The Senator from Illsmois, Mr. Douglas, had construed it to mean peace and conciliation, the Senator form Maine, Mr. Fassenden, had also said so. The President himself certainly used general terms of conciliation.—

But it was proper to enquire what kind of peace, and on what terms it can be maintained. The country, however, should not be lulled by a general assurance of peace, unless he was prepared to give it. He regretted that he had not been able to construct the inaugural address.
