The Gilmore well, on the Ralston farm, 23 ported in our last issue, commenced pumping on Monday morning last, and by time-piece this rate, but may be estimated as a No. 1 well. On Tuesday one of the most serious accident yet recorded occurred at Hon. A. Plumer's well, on the Clapp farm, near the mouth of Oil creek. gas and oil was instantaneous, and both were immediately in a blaze. Two men, whose both. names we could not learn, were seriously burned-one of them shockingly. The engine house, derrick, etc., were entirely consumed and a large quantity of oil lost. The engine was saved.

Messrs. Curtis & Hickok, on Oil creek, have a fountain well, which we previously noticed. They have, within a few weeks, without a pump, gathered without a pump upwards of 1200 barrels of oil. This well flows every day, Sundays excepted. This fact is as true as it is We commend this well as an example to all who are not disposed to respect the Sabbath lt is the model well of the re-

SUDDEN DEATH OF A CITIZEN OF ELIZA-BETH.—We are under the painful necessity, this morning, of recording the sudden death of another victim of intemperance, in the person of Mr. Samuel Frew, a talented lawyer of the borough of Elizabeth. He had been oity for several days, stopping at the National Hotel, Water etreet, during which time he drank freely, and about two o'clock on Saturkept by R. McFarland, corner of Ferry street and Diamond alley, where he lay for nearly two hours on a bench in the bar-room. Shortly before four o'clock he stepped up to the bar, in company with a friend, with whom he had been conversing, and asked for a drink. He took the bottle, poured out a glass full and was about to drink, when he stepped back suddenly, exclaiming "oh! my!" He seemed faint and ill and Mr. McFarland took him to the back door, thinking he was about to throw up. Returning to the bar room, Mr Frew took a chair, carried it to the door and sat down with his teet against the frame, where he grew half a mile down the river. Theirs is a sort of weaker and weaker.
