

THE PATRIOT.

For some days past there has been not enough of stirring incident in the news...

The time for battles has not come. It must be remembered that it is little more than a month since the war was...

That which is necessary to be done is done promptly as the case requires. Washington has been placed in a condition...

All this preparation betokens the immensity of the energy, resources and power of the government. The Southern States...

The government keeps its own counsel. Hitherto its movements have been brilliant and effective. They have been great...

It is impossible now to say where the last battle will be fought. The grain harvest now waiting upon the fields of some quiet hamlet...
